New Jump In Income Taxes Hinted By Treasury

16 Billion Dollars Additional Revenue Needed; Sales Levy Talked Of Again

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stiff increases in individual income taxes, ranging as high as 50 per cent in some brackets, may be suggested by the Treasury when Congress starts considering President Roosevelt's demand of 16 billion dollars additional revenues.

The President now has before him a pay-as-you-go tax measure which many legislators believed would head off any attempts to increase rates on individuals for at least two years, but informed sources said recent inquiries disclosed Treasury officials entertain no such view.

These officials were reported to be insisting on attempts to raise in direct taxes the additional amount the President has requested.

Sales Tax Discussed

One of a half-dozen schemes being studied by the experts reportedly would call for rate increases ranging from 50 per cent in the lower income groups to 15 per cent in higher brackets, where levies approach the 90 per cent limitation under present law.

There has been talk also of combining a sales tax with a levy on spending, although few members of Congress believe the Treasury will give any strong support to a sales tax.

There are indications, moreover, that all of these proposals will have to await return of Congress in September from a proposed recess.

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia and Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina of the House Ways and Means Committee have agreed that retroactive taxes on individuals must become a thing of the past because of the prospect that the Treasury soon will be collecting currently from such persons as they receive their incomes.

Calls for Veto

Meanwhile, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday urged James F. Byrnes, director of the Office of War Mobilization, to recommend that President Roosevelt veto the compromise pay-as-you-go tax legislation which Congress adopted and sent to the White House last Wednesday.

In a letter to Byrnes, praising the establishment of OWM as a "decisive step forward in the development of unified programs," Murray called the compromise tax measure "the equivalent of the Ruml plan," providing a windfall to large income groups, and "entailing a loss of huge income to the United States Government."

Urging that future tax legislation should be drawn on "a basis consistent with the national objectives of obtaining as much money as may be necessary from taxes to meet the war needs of this Nation," the C. I. O. chief went on record as opposed to a sales tax and asked Byrnes to "adopt a forthright policy" on wartime taxation.

Elliott Roosevelt's Son Upsets Rifle, Killing Playmate

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP).—William (Billy) Donner Roosevelt, 10-year-old son of Col. Elliott Roosevelt and a grandson of President Roosevelt, accidentally upset a .22-caliber rifle today. The rifle discharged, killing Billy's best friend, 11-year-old Lewis Hutchinson, son of an Ardmore investment broker.

The accident happened late this afternoon at the 168-acre farm home of Billy's mother—Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Windsor—at Edgemont in suburban Delaware County where the Hutchinson boy was spending the weekend.

W. J. Rushong, coroner of Montgomery County, said the boys raced into the house for some bows and arrows, and in the main entrance Billy tripped over the rifle standing in a corner.

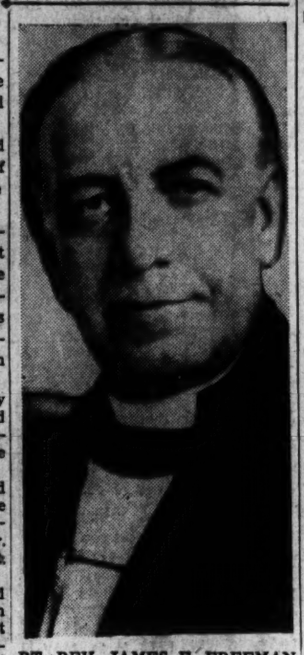
Friend of Eminent

Bishop James E. Freeman Dies; Builder of National Cathedral

(Comment on Bishop Freeman's Death on Page 7).



RT. REV. JAMES E. FREEMAN

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, the railroad man who became a bishop and built a cathedral, died yesterday at 5:40 a. m.

Death came to the 76-year-old Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Washington at his home in the Close of the National Cathedral.

Writer, evangelist, social worker, friend of the Nation's great men, the bishop maintained the intensive program of his long career until he became ill early this spring. Yesterday his family announced that he had "taken a turn for the worse."

The prelate had been seriously ill from a digestive disorder and Friday suffered a heart attack believed to have been induced by the heat.

At his bedside when the end came were his wife, Mrs. Elsie Vigelius Freeman, and his physicians—Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, Dr. William Earle Clark and Dr. H. R. Schreiber.

Bishop Freeman was the second Washington prelate to die within a month. Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident bishop, was killed May 3 in an Iceland plane crackup.

Bishop Freeman was consecrated head of the Washington diocese (which includes the District and part of Maryland) September 29, 1923. He came to Washington two years before as rector of the Church of the Epiphany. Earlier he had served in Yonkers, N. Y., and Minneapolis, Minn.

He was born in New York City July 24, 1866, the son of Henry and Mary Freeman. After attend-

Half Million U. S. Planes Seen by '50

OWI Air Survey Forecasts Vast Transport Fleet, Cites Production

Industry's Growth

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

An American Air transportation system of half a million planes was among postwar expectations listed by the Office of War Information yesterday in a survey which stressed that such an air strength will not drive other forms of transportation out of business as often predicted.

The OWI report said the Civil Aeronautics Administration "soberly contemplates" that the United States may well have a half a million private, commercial, and military planes in active service before 1950.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration was quoted as warning against "extravagant" claims for future peacetime air transport. High cost per ton-mile, which is not a wartime consideration, and immense problems of refueling, were said to be deterrent factors agains aviation's peacetime monopoly of transport business.

The survey pointed out that present wartime expansion of air transport is being accompanied by a vast, world-wide development of airways, communications, and airports which will be available to serve civilians after the war.

During 1943, OWI disclosed, the total production of American aviation—cargo and combat planes—will reach the total of $20,100,000,000, a fourth of our war budget for the year, and almost a seventh of the estimated national income. The automobile industry, in contrast, reached at its peak in 1941 only $3,700,000,000.

Fast Flight Schedules

In 1938, the total production of the aviation industry—transport and combat planes—amounted to $280,000,000, reaching $6,400,000,000 in 1942.

The survey stated that there will be about 865 major airports in the United States by the end of 1943, exclusive of certain military airdromes. Less than 100 such fields capable of handling large craft existed in 1940.

Another indication of the tremendous ramifications of future aviation was contained in the following flight schedules listed in the report:

Less than 7 hours to Mexico City, less than 8 to Panama City, 8 or 9 to Seattle, 10 or 11 to Paris or London, 16 to Moscow or Rio de Janeiro, 18 to Cairo or Buenos Aires, 22 to Tokio, 24 to Shanghai, and 26 to Chungking or Cape of Good Hope.

As another illustration of the shortening of time and space by air efficiency, the report cited a recent complaint by a young Air Transport Command pilot in Washington: "My laundry's in India—I can't get it till next week."

An additional factor bearing upon the future of American air transport is the number of persons who will be air-minded after the war, it was pointed out. These, the report said, probably will include the majority of more than three million men who will be in the air forces by the end of this

Cargo Vessel and Corvette Fired in Solomons Islands Raid on Shipping

Furious Air Fight

Raiding Japanese shipping off enemy-held Bougainville Island in the Solomons, American fliers beat off heavy fighter plane opposition, sank a destroyer, and left a cargo ship and corvette blazing.

The Navy, announcing this yesterday, said dive-bombers, torpedo bombers and fighters joined in the raid, and the furious air battle which developed when enemy planes flew out in an unsuccessful effort to avert the attack.

Warhawk, Corsair and Lightning fighters, together with gunners on bomber planes, accounted for at least 15 of what the Navy described as a "large force of Japanese Zero fighters." Three other enemy fighter planes were damaged. Four United States planes are missing.

Blows at Shipping

While the air battle raged, Dauntless dive-bombers and Avenger torpedo planes struck hard at the shipping. Several of the biggest bombs struck on the destroyer. It "undoubtedly sank," the Navy communique reported.

Other bombs hit the cargo ship, which might have been carrying supplies to enemy bases on Bougainville, and the corvette, setting them afire. The corvette, not described, was the first craft of that type reported in action under a Japanese flag. It was assumed that it was similar to the speedy and deadly craft given that name by the United Nations, resembling a small type destroyer.

Only a few hours before the assault on the enemy shipping, other bombers had flown out to pound Kahili again. In that raid on an enemy base near Buin on the southern tip of Bougainville Island, Army Flying Fortresses were employed. Results of their attack were not reported.

Kiska Raids Resumed

In the North Pacific aerial raids were resumed on Kiska, principal base established by the Japanese in the Aleutians. Liberator heavy bombers and the new Ventura medium bombers joined in five assaults there.

Bombs struck squarely in some gun emplacements, while others blasted buildings erected by the enemy on Kiska. Lightning and Warhawk fighter planes accompanied the bombers, but there was no report of any enemy opposition.

The assaults on Kiska were interpreted by some observers as a renewal of an aerial drive to soften the Japanese base made vulnerable by capture of the enemy positions on Attu to the west in the Aleutians. In event it should be determined to invade Kiska and drive out the Japanese—as was done on Attu—the bombing raids would aid in weakening defenses.

Mass Arrests on French Coast Reflect Nazi Fear of Invasion

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 6.—Prime Minister Churchill's visit to North Africa with the British and American chiefs of staff, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke and Gen. George C. Marshall, was widely viewed in the press today as a last minute checkup of plans for the next phase of European invasion, already in progress from the air.

Further evidence of German apprehension came in a Morocco radio report of new mass arrests of potential Allied helpers all along the French coast, mainly at Brest, Dieppe, Lorient and Le Havre.

A report from La Linea, Spain, opposite Gibraltar, said the harbor of the British bastion at the western tip of the Mediterranean was practically bare of shipping and virtually all Allied naval units and merchant ships had sailed. No large warships, and few freighters, were reported in the harbor.

The German radio said occupation authorities had clamped a state of emergency down again on the Norwegian port of Bergen. The Germans said military guards were greatly reinforced, that hundreds of storm troopers were patrolling the streets and that 600 residents were sent to labor concentration camps.

Most of the British press inclined to the view that the next major blow would fall upon the Italian island outposts or the Balkans. There was no general agreement as to when the action would start.

Churchill held a series of private conversations today at 10 Downing Street. His brief war report at the next sitting of Commons is not expected to tell much to friend or foe.

Some sections of the press warned against overoptimism.

"It is a mistake to regard the Italian campaign as a foregone con-

Report Has Marshall As Invasion Leader

London (Monday), June 7 (AP). Gen. George C. Marshall may lead the Allied invasion of Europe, the Daily Herald said tonight, speculating that he might transfer his staff officers to the Mediterranean or European theater of operations and remain out of the United States for the duration of the war. The newspaper, quoting American and British military circles as the source of its information, predicted a reorganization of the Allied command preceding any sea or air invasion across the Mediterranean.

Arms-Laden Vessel Rams Oil Tanker; 66 Out of 69 Men On One Craft Lost

By Harry Nash
Associated Press Staff Writer

Norfolk, Va., June 6.—Two American cargo ships, a tanker and an ammunition-laden freighter, collided off the U. S. Eastern Coast before dawn several days ago causing terrific explosions and blazing oil slicks that took the lives of 84 of the 150 men aboard.

Survivors, landed at Norfolk by Coast Guard and naval rescue ships, said the two vessels were proceeding in opposite directions on parallel courses when the freighter veered suddenly and rammed her bow into the tanker's port side aft of the forecastle head.

The explosions were so tremendous that wreckage and debris hurtled through the air and showered the decks of a Coast Guard ship a quarter mile away.

Sixty-six of the 69 men aboard the freighter perished in the blast that tore her to pieces and plunged her to the bottom almost immediately after the collision.

Eighteen of the tanker's complement of 82 were lost in the inferno that devoured her lifeboats before they could be launched, and forced her crew to leap overboard.

35 Navy Gunners Victims

Among the victims were 35 members of Navy gun crews, 25 of them aboard the freighter and 10 aboard the tanker.

(This account was released for publication after the Navy announced the collision yesterday in Washington. The Navy said it is investigating the collision.)

Among the survivors was Deck Cadet W. J. Leonard, 21, of Malverne, N. Y., who was in the tanker's wheelhouse. He said the freighter changed course suddenly and her bow struck the tanker's port side a glancing blow. The impact knocked Leonard down—and saved his life.

"The amidships house was quickly ringed by flames," he related, "and a sheet of flame swept through while I was on the floor. The captain, the first, second and third mates, six Navy gunners, and two signalmen were in the house. I believe they were all lost. They must have swallowed the flames."

Leonard heard two explosions, he reported, and he believed the first one was aboard the freighter and the second from the tanker. The freighter sank almost immediately, he added.

Heard Men Yelling

Escaping from the amidships house, the deck cadet jumped overboard and later climbed on a liferaft, carrying about 20 men. A naval ship picked them up an hour later.

"It was hotter than hades on the raft," said Leonard, who escaped with minor arm burns. "The wind kept changing, bringing the blazing oil nearer, and then blowing it away from us. I heard some men yelling as they struggled in the oil, but we could not help them."

A messman, Martin Varnell, 36, of Houston, Tex., was asleep.

Coal Wage Parley May Resume Today

Parley Opens Today

By Joseph A. Loftus

With the Nation's 500,000 striking miners returning to work today, qualified observers reported yesterday that sharply divided views among the soft-coal operators may send the miners' pay demands back to the War Labor Board this week.

Even an open split in the operators' rank is highly possible, it was said.

The 15-day period which the WLB gave the operators and John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to negotiate portal-to-portal pay and other issues expires Wednesday. Bargaining resumes today, assuming that the miners are back at their jobs as expected.

The miners are returning to work after six days' idleness, at the behest of President Roosevelt and under orders from the United Mine

Rain Breaks Heat; 'Much Warmer' Predicted Today

The heat wave which enveloped Washington last week was broken yesterday by rain which started at 6:35 a. m. and continued for three hours. The thermometer which reached a high of 96 Friday, dropped to 61 degrees at 9:20 a. m. Sunday.

Although the temperature rose later in the day and reached 71 degrees at 4:30 p. m., the weather remained comfortably cool in contrast to last week's heat wave. The Weather Bureau, however, predicted "much warmer."

WLB Ends Negro Pay Differential

Order in Texas Case Puts Workers on Equal Basis With Whites

The War Labor Board yesterday abolished pay differentials between white and Negro workers for a Texas company, saying in a broad opinion that "economic and political discrimination on account of race or creed is in line with the Nazi program."

The board directed the Southport Petroleum Co. of Texas City, Tex., to give pay increases to Negro employes which will "place them on a basis of economic parity with the white workers in the same classification." The board added that "to the credit of the company, this decision" was accepted by the management in good faith and spirit.

The board's opinion, written by Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member and president of the University of North Carolina, said that:

"In this small but significant case the National War Labor Board abolishes the classifications 'colored laborer' and 'white laborer' and reclassifies both simply as 'laborers' with the same rates of pay for all that classification without discrimination on account of color.

"This wage increase is made without regard to the 'Little Steel' formula, but with regard simply for the democratic formula of equal pay for work equal in quantity and quality in the same classification. This equalization of economic opportunity is not a violation of the sound American provision of differentials in pay for differences in skills. It is rather a bit of realization of the no less sound American principle of equal pay for equal work as one of the equal rights in the promise of American democracy regardless of color, race, sex, religion or national origin."

The company was directed to institute a reclassification system and to grant in each classification a wage increase of either 5 per cent or 5 cents, whichever is higher, the increases, the board said, will not bring the rates for the Southport field above the minimum bracket prevailing for other fields in the area.

No Easing of Ban

Sufficient Gas Due This Week For Essential Driving Needs

Sufficient gas for essential driving will be available in Washington this week, a spokesman for the Petroleum Administration for War said yesterday, but at the same time he said he saw no chance for a sufficient supply to permit lifting the ban on pleasure driving until next spring.

Additional pumping facilities have been installed on the Plantation Pipeline to Richmond, Va., which will allow the moving of 30,000 barrels of gasoline a day to that terminus instead of the previous 21,000.

There is now being moved by barge 9000 barrels of gas a day into the Washington area.

All during last week the fuel was also moved from Greensboro, N. C., by tank truck into Washington at the rate of 8000 barrels a day. The reserves on which these trucks were drawing in the North Carolina city were expected to be exhausted this week, however.

But offsetting that was the fact that the additional pumping facilities to Richmond were put in operation on Saturday, bringing 9000 barrels a day that much nearer the Capital.

It is now anticipated that the fleet of 100 trucks formerly used to haul the fuel from Greensboro to Washington will be put to hauling it from Richmond here, a much shorter haul.

The PAW spokesman said the forecast of available supplies and the anticipated needs of the Armed Services for the future indicate that civilians would still have to be prohibited from using cars for pleasure for almost a year.

Due to the draining of the reserves in Greensboro into Washington by tank trucks last week, a number of filling stations in the city were able to keep open yesterday, the first time in a number of weeks they have been open on Sunday.

One Dog Missing

"Princess," a Wounded Veteran Of K-9 Forces, Goes A. W. O. L.

"Princess," a private in the U. S. Army's WAGS, recently wounded in action, was reported A. W. O. L. last night.

Princess is a black and brown airedale. Before she enlisted in the K-9 Corps of the U. S. Army a year ago, she belonged to William McLean, 3313 Fortieth Street, Colmar Manor, Md. She was invalided home a week ago to convalesce at her master's home. Her wound was suffered in action with U. S. troops "on one of the fighting fronts."

Last night she wandered away.

Princess was wearing a regulation G. I. uniform when she turned up missing—her identification number, E050, tattoed on the inside of her left ear and the inside of her left leg.

Princess isn't used to civilians nowadays, her master said, and he believes she may have gone looking for some familiar khaki. Perhaps, he said, she even headed for some nearby Army camp, because she's been sort of fidgety for the last two or three days and seemed anxious to get back in action.

McLean is anxious for her to come home, because her wounded right leg hasn't completely healed yet. Besides, the Army wants her back on the firing lines when she's fully recovered.

So if a large black and brown airedale limps up to you, Colonel, and salutes smartly, you can be pretty sure it's Princess. And McLean would appreciate it if you'll call him at Warfield 2992.

And unless Princess has found some familiar khaki, she probably would, too.

J. M. Cunningham Killed in Crash

Joseph Maxson Cunningham, 48, of 208 East Thornapple Street, Chevy Chase, Md., president of the Lanman Engraving Co., died at Georgetown Hospital yesterday from injuries received when the car he was driving hit a tree at Connecticut Avenue, near Rosemary Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

In addition to heading the engraving firm, Mr. Cunningham was affiliated with a number of civic and business organizations of the city.

British Subs Sink 6 Ships In Blow at Italy

Two Others Severely Damaged, Air Field Bombed by Sea Raider

By the Associated Press

London, June 6.—British submarines prowling in the shadows of Monte Carlo and into or near Italian ports on the mainland, Corsica and Sardinia, have sunk six enemy ships, severely damaged another and probably torpedoed an eighth, the admiralty announced tonight.

One skipper surfaced his craft off Calvi in northern Corsica and bombarded an enemy air field.

Ships sunk were one large and two small supply vessels, an unspecified small ship, a medium tanker and the anti-submarine naval auxiliary. In the meantime in North Africa further reports of the blasting of the Italian naval base at Spezid yesterday said the raid was spearheaded by the largest formations of Flying Fortresses ever sent from Africa. In the attacks Allied air and naval forces struck new and damaging blows at Pantelleria, Sardinia and Sicily and loosed a cascade of battleship-busting bombs on Mussolini's anti-invasion fleet.

British warships poured a new weight of hot steel into the battered coastal defenses of Pantelleria at dawn Saturday in the fifth naval bombardment of that 8-mile long, 4-mile-wide stepping-stone isle in seven days. Pantelleria shore guns again failed to inflict casualties or damage on the attacking force.

Following this up yesterday, Mitchells, Lightnings and Warhawks made a triple assault on that island.

Buenos Aires, June 6.—Gen. Arturo Rawson's revolutionary government tonight decreed the dissolution of the Argentine Congress and also displayed an anti-Communist character by ordering the police to suppress any Communist statements and to close down the Communist newspaper, La Hora.

The action against the Congress occurred after a long meeting among Rawson and his new ministers, most of them military officials. All the men who overthrew President Ramon Castillo Friday are to take their oaths of office tomorrow.

Cargo Plane Plies D. C. Sky All Night With Jammed Gear

Five members of the crew of a cargo plane spent a night in the skies Saturday night when the plane scheduled to land at Washington Airport at midnight, was unable to do so because part of its landing gear jammed. The Post learned yesterday.

Circling for 11 hours over the Capital, the crew attempted to make repairs but dwindling gasoline supply compelled them to make a forced landing shortly after 11 a. m. yesterday.

Although the plane was damaged slightly, no one was injured.

'Evangel of Decadence'

Petain Assailed by De Gaulle, Predicting Fourth Republic

By the Associated Press

Algiers, June 6.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, addressing a mass meeting of his political admirers in a theater, accused Marshal Petain today of being an "evangel of decadence" and asserted that "the instinct of the French people guides them to a fourth republic."

"France does not ask to be liberated by others, even by her best friends—she does not want gifts," said the tall, khaki clad general. "We intend to win liberty ourselves, with the aid of others."

Two thousand listeners, including 26 Communist deputies of the old French chamber, soldiers of the Fighting French, several Catholic priests, red fezzed Moslems and one Arab sheik in a flowing robe applauded De Gaulle's brief speech.

Asking the crowd to give an ovation to the French Committee of National Liberation he had formed with Gen. Henri Giraud, De Gaulle said:

"We are making this unity for the glory of the republic and the republican regime. We are fighting on to victory as the equals of our Allies."

The meeting was organized by the De Gaullist "Groupe Combat," which flourished under cover in Algiers for more than three months after the Allied landings in North Africa last November.

Before De Gaulle and Giraud reached an agreement last week, Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, Giraud's deputy in charge of maintaining order in Algiers, had refused to permit today's meeting. Later, however, he was overruled by Giraud.

De Gaulle implied in his speech that the "groupe combat" would

Allied Air Power Growing in Pacific, Curtin Asserts

Sydney, Australia, June 6 (AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin said today Allied air strength in the Southwest Pacific "is to be considerably increased in the near future" as a result of representations to Washington.

Addressing the New South Wales Labor Party conference, Curtin said that the United States squadron in this theater already slightly outnumbered those of the Royal Australian Air Force.

Referring to the recent Washington conference, Curtin said: "I say with gratitude and may say with pride that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt agreed that the war in the Pacific will be prosecuted with the same vigor as the war in Europe."

2821 Nazi Planes 5-Week Toll of Reds

War Sidelights

Gen. Stilwell In Cairo on Way to China

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 6.—Lieut Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell reached Cairo en route to China today and declared:

"You may be sure that plans laid in Washington are entirely adequate and I believe their scope will satisfy all who cry out for strong, aggressive and immediate action."

The commanding general of U. S. forces in China, India and Burma attended the recent Washington conference of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. He came here from London, where he talked with Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, U. S. commander in the European theater of operations.

He expressed optimism and complete satisfaction with events within his own theater, where he is chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as well as American commander.

"I am certain of one thing—as time goes on, we shall have more and more reason to be proud of our great ally, China," General Stilwell said.

He conferred here with Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commanding U. S. forces in the Middle East. General Stilwell was accompanied by Brig. Gen. William D. Olds, chief of staff of the Tenth U. S. Air Force, and Col. Frank D. Merrill, operations officer.

Sweden Calls Up Men

Stockholm, June 6 (AP).—Sweden called up additional forces for army training today.

The call was by radio, used as a test. Radio callups may be used in an emergency.

The Swedish army commander in chief emphasized that the callup was not caused by foreign developments, but was part of a program announced in December for extensive winter and spring training. The number of men involved was not announced.

75 Axis Planes Found

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 6 (AP).—An additional 75 abandoned or wrecked Axis aircraft have been found in the Tunis, Bizerte and Cape Bon areas, making a total of 633 such planes discovered in northeast Tunisia since the campaign ended, it was announced today.

Most of the new discoveries were fighters and more than 45 of them were German types.

Russians Report Big Enemy Losses In Air Offensive

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), June 7.—Russian pilots and gunners smashed 752 German planes from May 30 through June 5, a week of violent and massive air raids, Moscow reported early today, to make a five-week toll of 2821 Nazi aircraft destroyed in the air and on the ground in Russia.

The 752 German planes were wrecked in the week ended Saturday against a loss of but 212 Soviet aircraft, said the Russian midnight communique. The Germans' May losses had been put at 2069 planes.

With ground fighting on a relatively minor scale, save for a German claim of an advance on the central sector in a six-day battle, the war on the Eastern Front had been waged mainly in the air, with Russian planes pounding German lines and transport, with the Nazis raiding Kursk with 500 planes, and the Soviets striking back at German-held Orel with 520 planes. The Russians reported 123 German planes downed in the Kursk region.

Three hundred Germans were killed Sunday in fighting on the Western Front, and 200 more were destroyed in the repulse of tank and infantry counterattacks in the Sevsk area, the midnight communique reported.

German radio reports Sunday declared that the Battle of Velizh had ended on the Central Front between Smolensk and Velikie Luki after six days of violent fighting, with Nazi lines "moved forward to a more favorable position.

The Russians made no mention of this area.

The German charges in the Sevsk sector, said the midnight bulletin, were intended to win back positions lost the day before," but all were beaten back and four German tanks were disabled.

Nazi Tank Inferior

New York, June 6 (INS).—The Moscow radio told the Russian people today that the highly publicized 72-ton German T-6 tank is inferior to earlier German tanks.

The T-6, known as the "Tiger," was said to be so overtaxed by armament and armor that its mobility suffered.

British Subs Sink 6 Ships Near Italy

to La Spezia yesterday was not yet in.

The preliminary report showed these results: A large number of 2000-pound armor piercing missives scattered in the midst of three of Italy's largest battleships, huge harbor areas blasted and rent and consumed in fire, a merchant ship exploded and a large barge sunk.

(Well over 100 flying fortresses evidently participated in the bombardment. The biggest previous raids by the "forts" based in Africa were on March 31, when about 100 of them blasted concentrations of small vessels at Cagliari in Sardinia, possibly spoiling Axis plans for an evacuation of German and Italian forces from Tunisia; on April 10 when 100 attacked La Maddalena in Sardinia, sinking the 10,000-ton cruiser Trieste and damaging the 10,000-ton Gorizia; and May 30, when more than 100 attacked Naples.)

Damages Reported

Dispatches from the fortress base last night by Associated Press Correspondent Harold V. Boyle, which gave the first news of the raid, said the 35,000-ton Battleships Littorio, Vittorio Veneto and Roma—perhaps half the backbone of the Italian battle fleet—were damaged by hits and near misses of armor-piercing bombs, and a heavy cruiser was hit.

Airmen on the expedition said there was no doubt the harbor and ships in it took a pasting, but fire and smoke blotted out the whole area from view so quickly that accurate observation was impossible and it was necessary to wait for later aerial reconnaissance to establish the results.

The Italian communique, received here in a broadcast, asserted that the damage was small, but described the air bombardment of Pantelleria as repeated and violent.

Taken by Surprise

The armada apparently took the Italian defenders by complete surprise by their long over-water flight and only three fighters were seen in the air to oppose the swarm of bombers. The antiaircraft gunners too appeared to be erratic and not up to strength. Although they went without fighter escort, all the Fortresses came home safely, despite Italian claims to shooting one down.

The R. A. F.'s heavy four-engined bombers from the Middle East delivered the sole blow against Sicily, attacking the harbor at Catania Friday night.

Southern Sardinia came in for a double attack with Lightnings sweeping over the airdrome at Monserrato and Marauders working over shipping at Porto Ponte Di Romano, where they hit a 500-foot motor ship and other targets.

The only serious fighter opposition encountered in these operations was over Pantelleria, where Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulf 190's attempted to ward off the recurring blows. They failed and lost four planes.

Among airmen participating in the raids was Staff Sergt. J. R. Parkinson of Annapolis, Md.

New Zealand Plane Lost With 15 Aboard

Wellington, New Zealand, June 6 (AP).—A Royal New Zealand Air Force flying boat with eight passengers and a crew of seven aboard was reported missing tonight. An announcement that an extensive search was being made gave no further details.

9 Washingtonians in Red Cross Arrive at Stations Abroad

Nine Washingtonians, serving with the Red Cross, have arrived safely at their destinations in North Africa, Hawaii and Australia, it was announced yesterday.

They are:

Philip R. Layton, assistant field director in Australia. He was formerly employed in the Office of Price Administration. His wife, Mrs. Norma D. Layton, lives at 2007 R Street Northwest.

Marjory Wood, club staff assistant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wood, 201 Second Street Northeast. She is a graduate of Central High School.

Leo Schwartz, assistant field director in Australia, was a statistical clerk with the Federal Public Housing Administration. Mrs. Schwartz lives at 3725 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Margaret A. Nottingham, secretary in the Hawaiian Islands, is the daughter of Mrs. M. G. Nottingham of 1625 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Christine L. Herrmann, secretary in the Hawaiian Islands, is the daughter of O. W. Herrmann of 3145 Mount Pleasant Street Northwest. She was graduated from Western High School, and was a playground director in the district.

Elizabeth L. Hatton hospital secretary in North Africa, attended St. Anthony's High School and Washington School for Secretaries. She was employed at the Station Hospital, Fort Meade, Md., prior to her assignment overseas.

Maxine J. Hale, telephone operator in Hawaii, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hale of 3304 Seventeenth Street Northeast. She was employed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. before she volunteered for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Hallie S. Baumberger, assistant club director in Australia, was formerly dean of Marjorie Webster School and a commentator for radio stations.

Isabelle M. Bauer, secretary in North Africa, who lived at 1900 F Street Northwest, was employed by the Machinery and Allied Products Institute here.

Two Die as Plane Crashes Home, Car

North Hollywood, Calif., June 6 (AP).—A P-38 fighter plane crashed into a home, an automobile and a garage today, killing the pilot and an unidentified woman, and frightening the residential neighborhood as the resulting fire set off ammunition in the plane's guns. The wild gunfire lasted for half an hour, but no one was injured.

The body of a woman was found in a car near the garage. Army authorities said the pilot's name would not be disclosed until next of kin had been notified.

Chinese Cut Off Enemy Units Along Yangtze

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 6.—Counter-attacking Chinese troops have cut off the retreat of several Japanese units on the Yangtze River Front of central China and are intensifying their mopping-up operations, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Enemy troops remaining in the outskirts of Itu, Yangtze River port about 18 miles below Ichang, which the Chinese entered Thursday, were bombed yesterday by Chinese airmen who forced the Japanese to flee in several groups, the communique said.

Chinese forces driving on Owchihkow, about 60 miles southeast of Itu, were reported to have retaken a number of points outside the town.

The war bulletin disclosed that a Japanese attempt to cross a new channel of the flooded Yellow River near Chuhsienchan, 35 miles southeast of Chengchow in eastern Honan Province, was repulsed.

Japanese planes crossed the provincial border this afternoon and headed toward Chungking, causing an air raid alarm in the capital, but the raiders turned northward and attacked Liangshan, 110 miles northeast of here.

Japanese positions at Chaoshih, north of the Yangtze River in central Hupeh Province, were attacked by the Chinese yesterday and the communique said losses were inflicted on the enemy. Japanese reinforcements headed toward Chaoshih also were attacked and suffered heavy casualties.

In a Chinese counterattack on Tuachwochan, south of Linchwan in southeastern Shansi Province, several Japanese-held points were said to have been retaken as the enemy retreated northward.

R. A. F. Blasts Channel Shipping, Rails in Northern France

By Ernest Agnew
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 6.—The R. A. F. hammered Channel shipping and French coastal districts today, while a squadron of Nazi fighter-bombers hit a southeast coastal town with explosives and machine-gun bullets.

The recent idleness of both the United States and R. A. F. heavy bombers, whose last raids were made May 29, had led some to conjecture that British-based squadrons had been transferred to the Mediterranean area, but the lack of activity was attributed officially to bad weather over the continent.

The Nazi attack on the English coastal town was made this afternoon. Some casualties resulted and a number of buildings were destroyed.

The German radio identified the town as Eastbourne.

Two minesweepers were set on fire, a locomotive derailed and five others damaged in the R. A. F. attacks on Axis transport.

Whirlwind bombers with Typhoon escorts found a line of minesweepers in Dover Strait, the Air Ministry reported, and two of them were left blazing after mast-height attacks with bombs and cannon fire.

Spitfires of a Canadian squadron hunted in pairs over northern France and, despite antiaircraft fire thrown up by gunners aboard two trains, damaged the locomotives.

"I may be small . . . but everyone knows I'm PLENTY IMPORTANT"

YEP, THERE ISN'T MUCH TO ME . . . I'm just a bit of paper with a number on it, hidden away in a leaflet with a lot of other numbers . . . but people have really had me on their minds since February 8th. Someone in the OPA set me to work, to see that everyone gets enough shoes, even though millions of pairs go to our Boys in Uniform (and they come FIRST).

● And that started Folks to thinking. I guess they thought something like this . . . "I've got just one No. 17 Coupon, and it's all I'm going to have for four whole months. I'd better be sure I spend it for the best shoes I can get for the money I want to pay."

● Yep, Folks really thought of Shoe-Quality as they never had before. Lots of them already knew that the place to get REALLY GOOD shoes is the Seven Hahn Shoe Stores. And you know what? Why, more thn 120,000 of my Ration Coupon brothers and sisters have gone to Hahn's and been turned in for Quality Hahn Shoes.

● In other words . . .

FOLKS KNOW I'M A PRETTY IMPORTANT LITTLE FELLER, TOO GOOD TO WASTE. THEY KNOW HAHN'S HAVE BEEN SELLING SMART, COMFORTABLE, LONG-WEARING SHOES FOR 67 YEARS. AND SMART PEOPLE JUST NATURALLY PUT TWO AND TWO TOGETHER.

District Man Wounded in North Africa

Corpl. Joseph Cheseldine, a native of Washington, was one of 384 United States soldiers wounded in action in the North African campaign, the War Department announced yesterday.

Cheseldine, 21, attended Holy Trinity School and Gordon Junior High School here before going to work in Philadelphia, where he was employed in a school cafeteria. He enlisted in the Army January 1, 1940, training at Fort Devens, Mass., and Camp Blanding, Fla., and was sent on overseas duty last August. His sister, Mrs. Mary Gates, resides at 308 Seventh Street Southwest.

Maryland men reported wounded were: Pvt. Charles A. Anderson of Baltimore, Pvt. Joseph B. Bowles of Solomons Island, Pvt. Willard Philhower of Elkton and Pvt. Walter S. Steiner of Baltimore.

Virginia men—Pvt. Leslie S. Bates of Buena Vista, Corpl. Roy J. Bowman of Marion, Pvt. Robert W. Branch of Franklin, Pvt. Willie D. Courtney of Remington, Pvt. Grover E. Evans of Harrisonburg, Private First Class Tullie R. Gray of South Boston, Private First Class Carroll L. Hankins of Axton, Staff Sergt. James B. Humphries of Craigsville, Pvt. Wardell Lewis of Suffolk, Pvt. Lynn T. Mayberry of Evington, First Sergt. Harold W. Sell of Richmond and Pvt. Russell Smith of Benhams.

Fights Surfaced Sub, Which Tries Dive Too Late

Depth charges from a Navy patrol plane shattered an enemy submarine and sent it plunging to the bottom of the Atlantic after a short engagement in which shells from the U-boat's guns riddled one wing of the plane the Navy announced yesterday.

The sinking took place last April. It was the first credited to the new Vega Ventura bombers, high-speed twin-engined medium bombers that have been officially reported in service only in recent weeks.

Piloted by Lieut (j.g.) Thomas Kinaszcuk, Elizabeth, N. J., the plane sighted the sub fully surfaced and dived from several miles distant.

"The submarine commander at first elected to fight it out," the Navy reported. "The sub's deck guns opened fire on the Ventura, riddling one wing. Undeterred, Lieutenant Kinaszcuk pushed the rugged warplane through the shell-fire.

"Then the sub attempted to crash-dive. Whistling along virtually on the surface of the water, the patrol bomber went in over the nearly-submerged conning tower and four depth bombs were released, three creating an in-line pattern just ahead of the sub's course and the fourth striking just forward of the conning tower."

The plane was pulled up sharply so that results could be observed by Lieut. Robert J. Slagle, Jonesboro, Ark., the second pilot. The Navy added:

"The sub was blown to the surwaves. A minute later, the bow of the underpass craft suddenly broke about 25 feet out of the water, at a steep angle. The sub slowly staggered forward in this attitude.

"More and more of the bow emerged, and in a few moments, the conning tower and forward gun broke the surface. All forward motion of the sub ceased. The bow raised sharply until it was almost perpendicular; then the submarine slid beneath the surface, leaving a 100-foot wide oil slick."

continue in existence as a political instrument of the Fighting French movement in North Africa.

Many wept when Prof. Rene Capitan, local head of the "Groupe Combat," mentioned in his introductory speech that the son of a "Communist deputy named Moquet, who was sitting on the stage with De Gaulle, had been shot by the Germans for resistance in France.

Andre Philip, one of De Gaulle's appointees to the new national committee, presented De Gaulle to the audience as "the symbol of our spiritual restoration."

The crowd hissed and booed at every mention by the three speakers to Petain, French chief of state, and the "traitor band" in Vichy.

Churchill Address To Troops Hails African Victory

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 6 (AP).—No campaign of the future will overshadow the victory won in North Africa, Prime Minister Churchill told 3000 cheering Allied troops assembled in the ancient amphitheater at Carthage during his recent Tunisian trip, it was disclosed officially today.

This campaign makes a long step forward toward peace, hope and honor, the Prime Minister declared.

He forecast that after the war the Allies would use air power to build up a better world and not to crush small nations as Hitler did.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden spoke briefly, saying: "The first thing a foreign secretary must learn to do is obey the prime minister. I tried another method once, but it didn't work."

At this point Churchill applauded enthusiastically.

Paying tribute to the R. A. F. for winning the Battle of Britain without which there would have been no good tidings now, Eden said a new chapter was about to open—not the last perhaps, but no one knew that.

More Yank Fliers Land in Britain

London (Monday), June 7 (AP).—Another large contingent of American airmen arrived recently at a British port, trained and ready to join the great Allied air offensive to soften up Europe for an invasion, it was announced today. The new arrivals included operational units.

The dates and numbers of newcomers to the rapidly growing U. S. Army Air Forces in Britain are kept secret by security regulations, but it is known that flying crews and ground personnel have been arriving in fairly regular intervals.

Transport Pilot Stands High As Holder of Short Snorters

Capt. M. P. O'Leary Has Ferried Many Notables Over Sea

Capt. Michael Patrick O'Leary, who yesterday told radio listeners, on the Army Hour, about the successful end of his search for his wandering laundry, has still another claim to fame—one of the most impressive "short snorter" bills in existence.

Captain O'Leary, who lives at 1 Scott Circle when he is not aloft on Air Transport Command missions, has a 7½-foot string of bills from most of the United Nations, covered with the signatures of the famous folk he has carried.

A short snorter, you see, is a person who has crossed an ocean by plane. If another short snorter catches him without his dollar bill, signed by other short snorters, the victim is charged $1 per s. s. present. Most travel-minded folk produce a single bill pretty proudly; Captain O'Leary produces a line of currency worth (in anybody's dough) $25.

On it are the signatures of more generals than the Pentagon ever saw, plus those of such famous international characters as Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong and his staff, and a score of radio and screen stars.

The bills came from China (the captain is one of the exclusive "Burma Roadsters"), Iran, India, Brazil, British West Africa, Canada, Trinidad, Egypt, the Belgian Congo, Dutch Guiana, Dakar, Algeria, Iceland, Scotland and the United States. O'Leary carries them in a special leather case. And owning them has earned about $100 for him when he catches other short snorters without their emblems of membership.

President Roosevelt is a short snorter, and occasionally is forced by colleagues to "pay off" when he neglects to carry his bill.

Captain O'Leary's strangest assignment was carrying a cargo of gold, worth roughly half a million dollars, from the African Gold Coast to Washington's Bolling Field—where a wary security officer refused to accept it because he had no authorization.

The harassed crew finally rented a vault in a District bank and dozens of telephone calls the next day resulted in its being retrieved by its rightful consignee, a foreign embassy here.

His toughest assignment? Flying across the South Atlantic 17 times in 21 days—possible "only because of the terrific job of the ground crew did."

His explanation of how his wandering wash finally caught up with him in Iceland, after chasing him most of the way around the globe, was part of the Army Hour's N. B. C. program designed to show how the men of our great civilian army are being trained to fight—how "a guy named Joe" turns into a major cog in a fighting machine.

The Army Hour followed various "Joes" from a New York induction center, through all the phases of training in army camps here, and ultimately to the North African battlefront.

clusion with victory speedily achieved," said the Sunday Graphic. "Misled by atrocity propaganda, the Italians may very well put up a stubborn and prolonged struggle."

In a similar vein, the Sunday Chronicle said:

"Every sign points to the fact that we are on the edge of what we hope and pray will be decisive events. We know the battle will certainly be bloody. It may well be long."

The lull in the heavy bombing offensive extended to eight days. The last big raids were on May 29, when the R. A. F. bombed Wuppertal and the Americans raided St. Nazaire and Rennes. Observers, however, attached no tactical significance to the recess, blaming weather over the continent.

The Moscow radio reported fresh fighting inside Hitler's Europe. Yugoslav guerillas were said to have repulsed German and Italian punitive forces again in heavy fighting in Bosnia and Montenegro.

censorship. It was a more drastic step than any taken by the deposed Castillo regime, which was backed by the Senate but opposed by the chamber majority of Radicals and Socialists who fought Castillo's isolationist policy and his maintenance of diplomatic relations with the Axis.)

Earlier, sources which are considered reliable had said that General Rawson had assured other hemisphere governments that he would follow a policy of close Pan American cooperation.

Castillo Professed Policy

(This in itself did not give any clew to Rawson's intentions, since Castillo's regime also maintained that it was following such a policy, even though that course allowed Axis agents to use Argentina as a listening post and intelligence center against the United Nations.)

It was reported that the only two civilians in Rawson's cabinet, Jose Maria Rosa, finance minister, and Horace Calderon, justice minister, had handed in their resignations tonight.

The action against the Communists today was taken after authorities declared that that group was preparing a secret political statement, and La Hora was closed after its morning edition carried a forthright plea for restoration of constitutional rights, for diplomatic relations between Argentina and Russia, and for a pledge to join the United Nations.

Enthusiasm Checked

The first official enthusiasm in Washington over the revolt in Argentina against the government of President Ramon S. Castillo last night was somewhat restrained as a result of reports concerning the composition of the new high cabinet.

A few of the members—although reports were not too specific—are believed to have leaned more toward Axis collaboration than toward the Allied nations before the revolt.

Diplomatic sources stressed their belief that any questions involving American lend-lease aid would be held in abeyance until the principles and aims of the new government are clearer to the United States.

There was some belief expressed that the revolt was carried out because of a fear of the growing strength of Brazil, who has benefited greatly under the lend-lease program.

84 Men Die As Two U. S. Ships Collide

Awakened by a shipmate, he fled from his smoke-filled quarters to the deck and started toward the lifeboats, only to discover they were afire from flaming gasoline scattered by the explosion.

"I saw three men dead on the poop deck," Varnell related. "I believe they were Navy gunners. One had his arms and legs blown off."

Varnell leaped over the side and swam for more than an hour before he was rescued by a Coast Guard vessel whose crew told him their deck had been showered by debris which the blast had rocketed across a quarter-mile of water.

"I don't see how we got out of it," said the puzzled messman.

He said he did not see the freighter and that at first he thought the tanker had been torpedoed. Several other crewmen said they too thought the tanker had been attacked by a submarine.

Varnell reported the tanker was still afloat and burning when he was picked up by the Coast Guard ship.

The freighter's entire merchant crew of 41 and 25 of her 28-man gun crew were lost. Of the three survivors, two were in such serious condition they could not be questioned. The third was Edward Matagora, 20-year-old Navy gunner of Newburgh, N. Y., badly burned about the face.

From his bed in a naval hospital, Matagora told how he was awakened by a shipmate, ran to the deck and leaped overboard without a lifebelt. He was rescued by a Coast Guard ship after swimming for two hours, the first 10 minutes of which he fought for his life through a blazing oil slick, diving frequently and swimming under water. He said he would have burned to death if he had been wearing a lifebelt, as it would have prevented his swimming beneath the surface.

Matagora, too, said he did not see the tanker and had not known whether the sinking came from a torpedo, a mine explosion or a collision.

The Navy said crew lists were not available.

Your Scalp Needs Thomas Treatment

AUTHORITIES estimate that perhaps 90% of all men in various age groups have hair problems coincident with some form of dandruff. Regardless as to your age—50, 40, 30, 20—you owe it to yourself to give your hair and scalp the attention and care which it needs and deserves.

Why not do as a quarter-million other men have done during the past 20 years—turn your problem over to a skilled Thomas expert? He'll remove those unsightly dandruff scales from your scalp, and leave it tingling with a fresh, clean, healthy feeling. You'll find Thomas treatment not only beneficial, but pleasant, restful, and invigorating. It will help, too, to allay itch caused by dandruff, or other local excrement.

Come in today for free advice and consultation. See what Thomas is doing for others—and find out for yourself how Thomas may be able to help you.

Sen. Connally Confederate Day Speaker

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declared yesterday that the United Nations soon will establish a second front and predicted that "Italy shall be conquered and subdued."

Speaking at the celebration of Confederate Memorial Day, in the amphitheater of Arlington National Cemetery, Senator Connally said:

"The distempered dreams of Hitler, his hopes of mastery of the world, shall be extinguished and destroyed; and let not Japan or Emperor Hirohito ever dream that they shall not feel the keen edge of our sword or the hammer blows of our war machine."

"No Cause Is Lost"

Calling the Confederate soldier "one of the greatest examples of the citizen soldier in history," the Texxas Senator said:

"No cause is lost that can give to history examples of heroism on the battlefield of its brave men and heroism of the women of the South who gave their sons and husbands and brothers to the armies."

Mrs. Maud Howell Smith was in charge of the early portion of the program which centered around the picturesque Confederate Monument in the cemetery. Graves of Confederate veterans were decorated and Col. Chester Hammond, U. S. A., placed wreath on the memorial, sent by President Roosevelt.

After a recitation of "Scatter the Flowers" by Marx E. Kahn, patriotic organizations led the processional to the amphitheater where Maj. R. S. Hudgins led the massing of colors.

Marine Band Present

The colorful Marine Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and Mrs. Robert Bachman, registrar-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, led the ritual of raising the flag.

Present were Mrs. Annan V. Hausman, representing the Grand Army of the Republic, and W. J. F. McElroy, past commander of the Sons of Union Veterans. The program was dedicated to the memory of Benjamin A. Hefferon, lone Confederate veteran to attend last year's ceremony, who died last March 16.

Fred P. Myers, of 1324 Eighteenth Street Northwest, is division commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and directed the ceremony.

'Getting Our Share Of War Material,' He Says in Speech

Berkeley, Calif., June 6 (AP).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, addressed a University of California alumni luncheon today announcing that he came to the United States for a conference which he hoped would "carry trouble" to the Japanese.

Declaring that "by the end of the year our planes and ships in the Pacific will represent a very formidable force," Admiral Nimitz denied that forces in his theater are being neglected.

"We are really getting our share of the war material in the Pacific," he said.

"Time is working for us. We are turning out planes and ships of war faster than the Japanese can. It is simple arithmetic—subtraction for them and addition for us."

Admiral Nimitz received an honorary doctor of laws degree at the University of California's commencement this afternoon. He headed the university's Naval R. O. T. C. unit from 1926 to 1929.

"Much as I desire to be here, I couldn't have left my post unless I had a job to do," he explained in his talk to the alumni. "I am happy that commencement day coincided with a conference which I have been called on to attend—a conference which is not particularly solicitous as to the welfare of Hirohito, and which I hope will carry trouble to the Japanese."

Noting that more than 90 per cent of the Navy's officers are now reservists, he assured the alumni group that "the reserves are coming through in grand fashion, as if they had been in the Navy all their lives."

The admiral recalled that it was just 12 months ago—June 2, 1942, on the third day of the Battle of Midway that "we turned back the Jap fleet and from that time on the Japanese have never made a serious threat to the security of our Pacific Coast."

He said the Japanese are now on the defensive in the Pacfic, attempting to hold what they already have taken.

"They are attempting now to knock out China," he declared. "We must do everything in our power to aid China, because we must use the bases in China to attack Japan."

Ex-Flying Tiger Says Nazis Are Tougher in Air Than Japs

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

An American Air Base in Algeria, June 6.—One of General Chennault's Flying Tigers says the Mediterranean area is "a much tougher league than Burma ever was."

"Competition is a lot keener flying against the Germans than it ever was against the Japs, and you have less chance of coming back from a mission," according to Maj. John Gilpin Bright, 24 of Reading, Pa.

Now a P-38 fighter pilot, he chalked up eight victories in six months of flying for China over Burma, and has shot down an Italian transport since coming here a month ago. He also set a German bomber on fire in a raid over Terranova, Sardinia, but three other fliers of the squadron he commands closed in and poured in bullets, so they cut the cards for the victory.

"I drew the deuce," Bright recalled ruefully as he swung his stockinged feet from a cot in a tent.

The young major, who joined the U. S. A. A. F. after the breakup of the American Volunteer Group in China, said he preferred fighting in North Africa, although the risk was greater, because of higher quality flying.

"It also is more fun fighting on the side you know is winning," he added. "Over there we were purely on the defensive, getting only an occasional pass at the Japs, who had the edge in air power. Here we are on the offensive and have the Germans in the same position the Japs had us in Burma.

"The only real similarity between flying here and in Burma is that it's done in the air. Everything is better run here and the average ability of Army Air Corps fliers is much higher than in the AVG. There were some 110 fliers under contract in the AVG, but about 15 or 20 did more than half of the work against the Japs. Here every guy carries his share of the load."

Bright, who is believed to be the only flier from the A. V. G. in Africa, said "the Japs have plenty of guts, but no brains. The Germans are more like us—they like to get back home and eat doughnuts. The Japs don't seem to care. They are still full of that old 'die for the emperor' stuff. But that makes them even more dangerous. The Germans are more cautious, skillful and scientific fliers. You can't take chances with them or they'll get you."

Bright said that despite the more canny flying in this area he would prefer to fly against a German foe than a Japanes if the Japanese ever get planes equal to those used by the Axis in the European theater. He rated Zeros as distinctly inferior to Messerschmitts or Italian fighter planes.

"Those Japs really don't know how to fly at all—look what our P-38's are doing to them now—but in good planes they would really be rough to fight. They're crazy enough now, but in a faster ship they'd be worse. They just don't worry about their own safety."

Back Broken in Africa, A.P.'s Gallagher Returns

New York, June 6 (AP).—J. Wes Gallagher, Associated Press correspondent, who suffered a compression-type fracture of the spine in a jeep accident near Bizerte, Tunisia, May 7, arrived here by plane today and said he was "feeling fine."

He is in a plaster cast which he expects to wear another four months.

year as trained pilots, navigators, radiomen, airport engineers and traffic controllers.

As to still developing means of air travel, the report stated that two companies have already filed applications with the Civil Aeronautics Board for cargo-carrying air service using gliders. The report pointed out, however, that despite many glider enthusiasts, the entire aviation industry is by no means sold on this form of transport.

Three applications for helicopter service were disclosed by the report. One application is for helicopter service to carry air mail and express to and from the rooftops of more than 400 postoffices and railroad stations in the six New England States and New York.

Helicopters, the report said, are generally considered one of the coming types of craft for the postwar private use market.

Lighter than air craft were given little hope for postwar development by the investigators. According to the record, the report said, ton-mile capacity per pound of critical material used in lighter than air craft is not impressive, although their long-range ability must still be considered of interest in special cases.

8 Perish in Crash Of Flying Fortress

Pyote, Tex., June 6 (AP).—Eight men perished and another was seriously injured in a crash of a Flying Fortress today, the public relations office at the Rattlesnake Bomber Base reported. The dead were:

Second Lieut. Joseph C. Folson, jr., pilot, Atlanta; Second Lieut. Norman P. Beck, copilot, Glenside, Pa.; Second Lieut. Edwin Everett Curran, East Boston, Mass.; Sergt. Alphonse M. Keedar, Stoughton, Mass.; Sergt. David Lachter, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Sergt. Robert Lee Been, Denver, Colo.; Sergt. Allen Y. Mumford, Jackson Center, Ohio; Sergt. Edward W. Trapp, West Salem, Ohio.

Seriously injured was Sergt Kennard C. Stevens, Stratton, Me.

The plane was returning to the base after a routine local flight and was preparing to land when an engine ignited. An attempted emergency landing in the desert resulted in the crash, officers said.

Army Plane Crash Kills 5 in Texas

Dalhart, Tex., June 6 (AP).—Five men were killed and four others parachuted to safety in the crash of a heavy plane from the Dalhart Army Air Base. Three parachutists were hospitalized.

The following were killed:

Lieut. Harland S. Severson, Santa Maria, Calif.; Lieut. Philip R. Sallee, Lexington, Ky., Lieut. Edgar C. Hanks, Monrovia, Calif.; Staff Sergt. Richard L. Waters, Jacksonville, Fla.; Staff Sergt. Edward M. Proeozich, Etna, Pa.

The four who parachuted were Staff Sergt. Stephen A. Wedge, Westfield, Mass.; Staff Sergt. Charles R. Patterson, Franklin, Ind.; Staff Sergt. Oscar A. Nelson, Broaten, Minn., and Sergt. Frederick F. Babb, Highland, Kans.

Babb is in a Clayton, N. Mex., hospital for second-degree burns. Wedge was unhurt.

18 Soldiers Killed In Truck Crash

Nashville, Tenn., June 6 (AP).—Eighteen soldiers were killed and eight others injured late yesterday when an Army truck in which they were returning to a maneuver area after a weekend leave crashed through a bridge rail and down a 30-foot embankment, the Second Army public relations office reported today.

Dear Jack: Today a fellow read me a letter from his boy in the service. It made me realize that in spite of all the things that keep me awake at night, I am just plain lucky.
Maybe I am short of gas, but I can still travel around without an enemy plane "dusting" me off the road. Food rationing is a bother; but I do eat regularly. I work hard at my job, but how about the fellows who are doing the fighting, or training for it. When I get home I can take a hot bath, and go to bed without fear of being blown into the cold North Atlantic.
What I really ought to lie awake about is figuring what more I can do to help the boys who are risking their lives for me. I can never repay them but at least I can try to put 15 per cent of my income in war bonds. After all that is only a loan and it is the safest investment I can possibly make.
Sincerely,
Your Name
V....-MAIL

Uncle Sam wants our fighting men to know what the folks back home are doing to help win the War. Lives there an American who does not have someone close to him or her in the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard or Merchant Marine? If you are buying enough War Bonds to look him in the eye, then send him a V....-MAIL letter like the one above, or one you write yourself.

Here are two easy ways to cure that feeling that your War Bond purchases are not what they should be:

1. Payroll Savings Plan—the surest and easiest way for you to buy bonds and save your money. All you have to do is tell your paymaster or treasurer to give you at least 15% of your pay each month in War Bonds, that you can use later to buy the things you want and can't get now.
2. Personal Savings Plan—your local bank will gladly help you to arrange a personal plan for the investment of 15% of your income each month in War Bonds.

Do it today, then write your V....-MAIL letter. You will sleep better tonight.

Why V....-Mail?

It is the one method that guarantees delivery of mail in the shortest possible time. All V....-MAIL goes overseas by air.

It reduces the weight of mail 98%, thereby releasing valuable space for the shipment of vital supplies, munitions, and equipment.

How to Send a V....-Mail Letter

1. Get V....-MAIL form from your postoffice, stationery or drug store.
2. PRINT his name, address, rank or rating, unit to which he is attached, APO or Naval address, and your name and address, both at the top of the inside page, and on the outside.
3. Write your letter within the marginal limits of the space provided (see above). Send a separate V....-MAIL letter if you need more than one page. Write LEGIBLY, or use a typewriter. Black ink is best.
4. Fold, seal, attach a 3c stamp (6c for domestic air mail), and deposit in any postoffice or mailbox. Do not place any enclosures in the letter.

SAFEWAY

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Good Neighbor Policy

ONE OF THE most significant and frequent questions asked of Vice President Wallace on his recent trip through Latin America was: "What will happen to the Good Neighbor policy after President Roosevelt leaves office?"

Time after time he was asked: "Will you continue to be Good Neighbors when a Republican Administration comes into power?"

His reply was always the same.

"President Hoover," he said, "was the first President of the United States to come to Latin America and he was a Republican. I am sure that Republicans feel just as deeply the importance of being Good Neighbors as do Democrats."

White House Rationing

Mrs. Henrietta Nesbit has just got through with the task of stretching her ration points to feed, in one month, four Presidents and a Prime Minister, with a return engagement of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek thrown in for good measure.

"It was a struggle," she says. "I had to squeeze like anything."

The ration board failed to reckon with all these Presidents when it issued points to Mrs. Nesbit, White House housekeeper. It reckoned on only one—Franklin D. Roosevelt and his family, plus the Hopkinses, with a meager allowance for entertainment.

The ration board wrote down the White House as an "institution," and dealt with it like a hospital, a hotel or an asylum. That meant Mrs. Nesbit was issued ration points on the basis of December's "business." But the White House had little "business" in the month of December, for there were few visitors and few parties.

Result is that when May came along, bringing the Presidents of Bolivia, Czecho-Slovakia and Liberia, plus the Prime Minister of Great Britain, plus a repeat visit by Mme. Chiang, Mrs. Nesbit simply didn't have enough ration points to go around.

No More Ration Points

And the amazing thing is that instead of running to the ration board for extra points—and no one would have blamed her for that—she "just managed somehow." She managed by bearing down hard on the poultry and fish, as any housewife does these days, and by saving as many beef points as possible to serve to the Prime Minister's party—"because everybody knows the British like beef, and they don't get much of it at home these days."

Now that it's all over, Mrs. Nesbit has two sets of books to balance—the money books and the ration books. It's a double banking job, for her ration points are not drawn by tearing coupons out of a ration book, but by drawing checks on her ration account at the bank, as any other institution must do. And this bank account must balance, together with the financial account.

There's a further complication in the fact that when a member of the White House family—Mrs. Roosevelt, for example—goes away for more than seven meals in the week, she has to be checked out of the ration banking and to be given an individual ration book. Then when she returns, the book is surrendered to Mrs. Nesbit, and Mrs. Roosevelt joins the "institution" again.

But there is some comfort in the fact that, though they must be tired of chicken and fish by now, nobody "upstairs" has complained.

Even chicken is difficult to get. Mrs. Nesbit finds you can't wait until the day you need it and expect to get an order filled.

It takes planning days in advance. And you have to take the fish when you can get it, for fish of good size, such as halibut or salmon, comes from New Eagland or the West Coast, and can't be had every day.

Week-Old Ice Cream

TO BE SURE of having ice cream for any occasion, Mrs. Nesbit keeps a few gallons on hand. Refrigeration in the White House kitchen makes it possible to keep ice cream for a week, or even two weeks if necessary.

And if ice cream can't be bought, she can always get cream—though not whipping cream—and make the ice cream at home.

It's also a good thing to keep a back log of sugar to meet a sudden demand for punch for a garden party. But here is where Mrs. Nesbit made a mistake. Before sugar rationing, she had a supply of 300 pounds on hand, and decided to be virtuous and turn it in. Later she had urgent need of it.

"Sometimes when I get in a jam, I wish I hadn't been so noble," she says.

Well, the month of May is over, and the parade of Presidents has lessened. But June is here, and before Mrs. Nesbit has fair time to balance her books, along comes the President of Paraguay, to be followed by the President of Chile.

And who knows, maybe that man Stalin will pop in any day?

Merry-Go-Round

Patches of paint are peeling off the White House. . . . Because of the war the Executive Mansion has not been painted for some time. . . . Vice President Wallace picked the hottest day of the spring to open his private tennis season, playing with his sister, wife of the Swiss Minister. . . . Hard-working Representative Francis Case of South Dakota reads and digests every bill that is introduced in the House. . . . Senator Jim Mead of New York and his office staff have gone on a seven-day week for the duration. The election of Gerard Dobbin, secretary of Representative Albert Engel of Michigan, as president of the Congressional Secretaries Club made a big hit with Capitol newsmen. They consider Dobbin one of the topnotch aides in Congress.

WLB May Get Coal Wage Dispute Again

Workers. Lewis has set a June 20 deadline for continuance of their work under present conditions, spurring congressional advocates of antistrike legislation in an effort to enact such measures by the U. M. W.'s deadline.

WLB has scored the tactics of "bringing to the bargaining table the threat of a strike interrupting war productoin," and there remained the possibility that it would order bargaining negotiations suspended in view of the Lewis deadline.

Informed sources reported meanwhile that the operators have petitioned the board for modification of its order giving the miners certain free equipment and tools. The operators contend that the grant exceeded the union's demands, in that in some respects it included tonnage workers while the miners asked those concessions only for day and monthly men.

The division among the operators is not clearcut between the North and the South. The Northern commercial operators, for the most part, are pictured as anxious to settle with the miners in negotiations as soon as possible. They believe that a contract hammered out in the conference table is worth more, and gets better results, than a document handed down arbitrarily and forced upon the parties.

A few operators in the South hold a similar view, but authoritative persons say that the Southern group for the most part have been holding out for a War Labor Board adjudication of all issues.

The captive mines present a third complication. They are operated by the steel companies, which consume all the coal produced, and are located in the North and the South. The steel companies, operating at new high capacities, are purchasing large quantities of coal from commercial mines. This makes them not only a producer of coal, but a purchasing consumer as well.

An increase in coal prices, if allowed by the Government, to cover increased labor costs, would not meet their problem as it would the financial problem of the commercial mines. They may demand an increase in steel prices and assurances that they can get such an increase from the Government apparently have not been obtained.

A division of interests and opinion among the operators is not new and even an open split has precedents, such as that of 1941. This year's negotiations, in fact, began with the Northern operators and the Southern groups meeting the miners separately. The WLB interim order of May 25, however, made no distinction between the two groups.

Since then they have been meeting the miners jointly. However, the common front is only nominal. The two groups of operators have caucused separately on several occasions. The job of maintaining an appearance of a united front has become increasingly difficult and, reliable informants say, the division has seriously hampered progress in negotiations.

WE'D LIKE TO GIVE AN "E":

Yes sir, we'd like to give a Transportation "E" to that unknown passenger, who, when told that H Street was the end of the line for all buses on his route during the gas shortage, took a look at his precious No. 17's, laughed and stepped out for that stop, several blocks away.

As he left us, we heard him say to a friend: "Well, walking five blocks for a bus after a hard day's work is no fun, but if it saves gasoline and gets it to our boys in Africa and the South Pacific I'm all for it, and the exercise is good for me, too." Yes, we think that man deserves an "E", but of course, we aren't permitted to give "E's".

And then if we could and gave one to just a single passenger, we'd be alighting all the thousands of other bus patrons who took the sudden dislocation of their bus riding habits with a smile and patriotic fortitude.

Murray Asks OWM Voice For Labor

By the Associated Press

President Philip Murray of the C. I. O., in a letter to Director James F. Byrnes of the Office of War Mobilization, urged yesterday that OWM "recognize the need for the participation of labor in the formulation and administration of its policies."

"It is essential now," Murray said, "that appropriate steps be taken in carrying through of constructive policies so that the Office of War Mobilization, strengthened and broadened with labor participation, may effectuate a total mobilization of our resources, materials, machinery and men behind the armed forces to carry out the military decisions agreed upon between our Commander in Chief and the leaders of the other United Nations."

At a press conference last week, President Roosevelt indicated that he would not add a labor representative to the OWM. A reporter told him there were reports labor and farm representatives would be appointed to the committee, and Mr. Roosevelt replied that those urging expansion of OWM were the very persons who had complained earlier that he needed to establish a small, compact war cabinet.

In his letter to Byrnes, Murray also reiterated that the C. I. O. objects to the pay-as-you-go legislation enacted by Congress, criticized the Aministration's manpower policies, and described as "half-hearted" the measures taken to stabilize prices.

Asserting that the tax bill "grants a windfall to large income groups," Murray told Byrnes: "It is my judgment that you should recommend to the President that this bill be vetoed."

Murray declared the Administration is following a "crazy quilt approach" to manpower problems, adding:

"At the present time, although all available manpower is now being utilized, employes are prevented from leaving their place of employment, even though the rate of pay be 'substantially less than that prevailing in the locality in the same or substantially similar work.' This policy does not even purport to be addressed to any war need and simply adversely affects the morale and efficiency of workers."

Treasury to Borrow $2,500,000,000 Soon

Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, announced yesterday that the Treasury will borrow about $2,500,000,000 of "new money" at the end of this month, offering a security with a maturity not to run beyond ten years.

OPA, With Support of Labor, Plans to Trim Coffee Prices

By the Associated Press

With butter and meat price rollbacks by means of subsidies already ordered into effect, the Office of Price Administration went ahead yesterday with plans to extend the program to coffee, encouraged by labor support and unmoved by objections from trade sources and a segment of Congress.

Just when the coffee cut will take effect, OPA officials said they were unable to predict, but the butter subsidy will begin to make itself felt in housewives' grocery bills Thursday and the meat rollback, ordered formally Saturday night, will reach the packers today and the final consumer by late June or early July.

Last night's meat order, estimated to take three-quarters of the estimated 400 million-dollar annual cost of the whole project, was issued in the face of a House Banking Committee vote forbidding subsidy payments by the Commodity Credit Corp., a Department of Agriculture agency.

DSC to Make Payments

The Defense Supplies Corp., a subsidy of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., will make the meat subsidy payments to packers, as well as the butter and coffee disbursements, under a provision of the price control act permitting subsidies to encourage production of strategic products.

The House Banking Committee action last week on a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for two years, covered payments by that "or any other Government agency . . . of subsidies to maintain maximum prices" on agricultural products.

The meat announcement brought from the American Meat Institute in Chicago a statement that "the OPA's so-called subsidy simply will add further confusion to an already confused situation," the packers asserted that both their own industry and the producers were in "unalterable" opposition. The statement followed testimony by packer representatives before congressional committees last week that the subsidy program would not encourage meat production but would tend actually to reduce it by threatening loss of the facilities of some small producers who they said would be unable to operate on present profit margins. The meat institute asserted none of the subsidy of 2 cents a pound on dressed carcasses is intended to go to the packers but was all to be passed on to producers.

Charles K. Elkinton, an OPA meat price executive, said the price control directors were aware of the opposition of the trade "but we have no reason to believe that the subsidy will interfere with the operations of the War Meat Board, as claimed by the institute."

Support for the subsidy program, and an implied call for its extension, came meanwhile from Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. In a letter to James F. Byrnes, director of War Mobilization, Murray called attention to the presidential directive for stabilization of living cost prices at the September 15, 1942, level, and asserted that "only half-hearted measures have been attempted" in that direction.

Murray's Letter

Murray wrote:

"The OPA, recently in fixing dollars and cents prices, has admittedly placed them at a higher level than that which prevailed before. The rollback has only been promised for meat, butter, and coffee. A program of subsidies which is essential if the rollback to the September 15, 1942, level is to be effectuated has not been vigorously supported and practically no attempt has been made to stop the selfish pressure groups in Congress from defeating this policy. Administration representatives, such as Chester Davis, food administrator, have actually testified in opposition to the policy of subsidies, thereby actually opposing the rollback of prices. The effective rent control of the OPA is being seriously threatened by real estate groups which are exercising their pressure on the OPA and in Congress.

"You are now obligated, as the director of the Office of War Mobilization, to put into effect the mandate of Congress and of the President of the United States that prices be rolled back to the level of September 15, 1942. Whatever appropriations may be necessary by way of subsidies to accomplish this end should be obtained. The OPA should be strengthened in its policies in regard to prices, rent control, and rationing and given vigorous and unstinted support when carrying them out."

Italians Pressed To Join Sea War

London, June 6 (AP).—Tass, Russian official news agency, said in an Istanbul dispatch today that the Germans are making "insistent demands" for the immediate withdrawal of the Italian navy from Adriatic bases for effective use in Mediterranean operations, and added that the discussions have become so acute that a German ultimatum to Premier Mussolini is regarded as probable in Rome.

German representatives in Rome, headed by Naval Attache Levisch, were reported to be demanding that the Italian fleet "abandon its policy of expectancy now that the menace of Europe has reached its climax." Admiral Arture Riccardi, chief of the Italian naval staff, and other high officials were said to have joined in discussions of Italian naval strategy with the Germans.

Young Autograph Collector Gives Prized Item to Aid War

Marshall Farmer, 20, of 21 S Street Northwest, has turned his autograph hobby into a patriotic project.

Last week he gave 67 frames with 1043 autographs of famous persons to the Treasury Department, to be auctioned at bond rallies. The young man, a clerical worker at a paper products plant here, explained:

FARMER

"I was classified F-4 last February. Since I couldn't go into the Army I wanted to give the most valuable thing I had—my autograph collection. For seven years I wrote letters and sent boxes of apple candy to get those names. So they meant a lot to me."

The first group of four frames with 96 signatures of the great and near-great in the fields of politics, literature, stage and screen brought $1425 in war bonds at a rally last week.

With eyes gleaming, Farmer named some of his most prized signatures—President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, and Duke and Duchess of Windsor, all the United States Senators and Representatives and Governors of the 48 States. Just before war began in 1939, he sent a box of apple candy to Hitler with the hope of receiving his signature. As yet, Farmer has had no reply.

By Roger W. Babson

Free Enterprise Must Rule

Military arm-chair strategists are now being superseded by college professors, pseudo economists, organizations, officials and even certain "crackpots." All of these have their pet ideas for solving our postwar problems. Many of these have some ax to grind. Much that they offer is over my head. After all I am just a country boy living in the woods of Babson Park.

Commonsense, however, tells me that our most responsibl employers and labor leaders should be given the power to provide full postwar employment.

My readers should make no mistake about one thing. What the "crack-pots" have now to say about politicians, New Dealers and postwar planning will not bear much fruit. The boys who will conceive and put into effect our postwar economy will be our returning servicemen. "All right," you say, "these may account for only 10 million votes." But I predict that this group will be the most intelligent and constructive minority group that our country has ever seen.

Outside of the military, there is still little real leadership in our country. I have in mind not only the theorists, dreamers, soreheads, labor leaders and politicians, but other people of our national life who depend upon pull, graft, waste or bureaucracy for a livelihood. The title of a recent picture in Time Magazine to the effect that "our wounded do not cry," was very significant.

Our boys are developing character, courage and initiative. They will be our salvation in future years. Upon their return, they will follow the Ten Commandments and the multiplication table and stand for no nonsense.

Recently there was held at Babson Park, Mass., the graduation exercises of the first group of naval officers who had completed their course of training for the Navy Supply Corps. The majority of these new officers came from active business. After the war, they want to get back into business. In my humble judgment, they will not like planned economy. They are already looking ahead to the time when they and other men can, without Government interference, create conditions favorable to reasonably full employment and to a high standard of living.

In a democracy such as ours, it is important that we be a well, and not a sick, Nation. France, Italy and Germany—once vigorous, up to date and modern states—gradually became infected with totalitarian bacteria. They literally sickened and now are facing self-destruction. Russia, temporarily, has found a specific for her disease. Certainly she is recognizing and rewarding individual leadership. Politicians, not intelligent industrialists, make sick nations. The politicians of Europe were, in fact, responsible for World War II.

Whatever policies are adopted in our postwar era—and it would be well to sow and cultivate the seeds now—it is essential that they make possible a continuance of private enterprise. The competitive spirit must be upheld. Personal incentive and initiative must be recognized. Private capital must be allowed to accumulate in order to finance the reconversion of plants from war to peacetime operations. This is also necessary for new enterprises and research work as well as for rehabilitation of worn-out properties. The investor must be given an opportunity to participate in postwar business.

Taxation now and in future will be heavy, but it should not approach the confiscation point. Furthermore, provided that businessmen and investors are allowed to make reasonable profits, there will be little objection to paying necessary taxes. Government borrowing of huge sums to be spent "for spending's sake" must stop. Our past 10 years of colossal spending without regard for services received proved to be a disastrous experiment. Further borrowing or spending after the war for purely public benefit can only hasten the worst effects of inflation; but these mistakes may not be repeated.

Before we enter the postwar period, we must go through the transition stage. Some concerns may be able to reconvert from war to peacetime operations within a few months. For the most part, however, there will be no sudden return to prewar living. It seems certain that we shall continue an armed Nation for many years after hostilities cease. Hence, I do not expect our armament industry to collapse overnight. Relations with our Allies, the affairs of labor and management, the relationship of Government and business will be an important part of this transition picture.

I see that Mayor LaGuardia of New York, for whom I have great respect as a public administrator, wants Washington to spend 300 million dollars now on postwar plans. He further wants Congress to authorize the spending of nine billion dollars as a nine-year grant to cities and towns to relieve unemployment.

Whether such a program would be a continuance of waste, a furtherance of inflation and make for an even greater bureaucracy, I leave for my readers to decide. Certainly, I do not believe that such a program would appeal very much to our returning service men. They will want real work—not an excuse to draw a pay check.

Children's Day Rites Featured By Churches

With yesterday the first Sunday in June, traditional Children's Day exercises dominated many religious services in the metropolitan area. Graduation ceremonies for youngsters in church schools departments, pageants and other programs high lighted the observance.

Sunday school scholars of the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest, staged their Children's Day program in the church garden after the morning worship service, and received their departmental graduation diplomas.

The junior church attended services in a body and the children's chapel choir sang at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northwest. Dr. George Earle Owen, missionary supported by the church, was the speaker. He and Mrs. Owen leave shortly for missionary work in Buenos Aires. Mount Rainier Christian Church sponsored a Children's Day pageant and other activities.

Meanwhile, other events of special children's interest—daily vacation Bible schools—will be discussed at a leadership training course today, tomorrow and Wednesday, 4 to 6:30 and 7 to 9 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

The course will be sponsored by the committee on vacation Bible schools of the Washington Federation of Churches. Mrs. Grover L. Hartman is committee chairman.

Mary Alice Douty of the Baltimore Methodist Conference Board of Christian Education, will be a dean of the course. Instructors will be Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, Mrs. O'Neal M. Johnson, Miss Evelyn Albers, Mrs. Lewis M. Turner, and Miss Douty. The Rev. Gaye McGlothen, secretary of religious education for local Baptist churches, will be registrar.

Seventy-six congregations will participate in vacation Bible school programs in 50 churches this summer.

Ross E. Pollock, Long Active Here, Is Dead at 65

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, for Ross E. Pollock, 66, long-time resident of the District. Interment will be private.

Mr. Pollock, who was at one time with the United States Consular Service in Santo Domingo, died at his home, 1316 Delafield Place Northwest, late Saturday night.

He had served as assistant to the officers of the American Security & Trust Co., and retired from that position several years ago. He has lived in Miami and Washington since that time. For many years, Mr. Pollock held the position of superintendent of Sunday schools at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Pollock, and two sons, Maj. Clark Carroll Pollock, U. S. M. C., and Ross E. Pollock, jr., 5509 Broad Branch Road Northwest, secretary to the Committee on Administrative Personnel, United States Civil Service Commission.

Free Speech Dr. Hastings' Sermon Topic

"Freedom of speech is religion-rooted," Dr. J. Warren Hastings said yesterday at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, starting a sermon series on "The Four Freedoms."

Dr. Hastings stated that "there is something about Christianity which suggests personality freedom, and, in a sense, independence," and added:

"We must ask ourselves why we speak and for what end. The world cannot be filled with monkey-jabberings. Men are moral beings, created in the image of God, and they should not stoop to misuse that faculty, speech, which reveals intent, purpose and ideals."

The clergyman contended that "the only man worthy of free speech is the person with a sensitive conscience, and a man has to by spiritually prepared before he can actually and properly accept the right of free speech.

"Unless free speech is a product of the religious experience, it is a misnomer," he continued, "for unless freedom of speech operates on a basis of high character it will tear the world to pieces. God help us to realize that this freedom about which our President talks can come only as a result of strong men and women of faith and integrity."

Ku Klux Klan Blamed in Strike

Detroit, June 6.—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), said today that he had "absolute evidence" that a strike at the Packard Motor Car Co. last week was promoted by the Ku Klux Klan or its successor body in Detroit."

Thomas said he was turning his evidence over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and that he also would ask for a congressional investigation.

The Packard strike began Thursday, but union leaders have predicted that "almost normal" production would resume Monday. According to the company, the strike occurred after white workers walked out after Negro employes were promoted.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

AS TIME GOES BY. It seems incredible but "Ringside Table" has been in existence for five years. Let's look back and see what was happening in that far-off summer of 1938.

RAINBOW ROOM REDECORATED. Now, there's up-to-the-minute news. For the Rainbow Room is being done over right now. But back in '38 they had a colossal party to celebrate the redecoration of Rainbow. Milton Davis was leading the band then as now

Maestro Johnny Shaw, now of the Mayflower Lounge, was leading his band at the Madrillon. . . . Johnny Slaughter was making music in the Metronome Room. Bandleader Slaughter has since come into a pot of money, spends his time fishing.

THOSE OLD TIME SONGS. "Flat Foot Flugie" was sending the town into spasms. Bill Strickland's Lotus band waxed especially maniacal in "F. F. F." . . . Eve Knight of the King Cole Room was murmuring "Love Walked In." . . . There was also "A Tisket, A Tasket," "Small Fry" and "The Butcher Boy."

THE STARLIGHT ROOF was then the Powhatan Roof. Steve Le Sieur, now of the Army Air Corps. Among his men were Bob Callahan, whom you now hear on the radio, and Bill Chisholm, who later moved to the Lounge Riviera, then joined the Coast Guard.

Del Rio was not even a twinkle in Herbie Sachs' eye. Its present location was a real estate office. The Balalaika was an apartment house basement, occupied by nothing but coal and brooms. The buildings that house Treasure Island and Restaurants "823" and "400" had not been erected. The Statler Hotel people hadn't given a thought to coming into Washington.

ANCHOR ROOM entertainment was strictly by the guests in the summer of '38. But there was a very special host—Victor Sampson, a quarterback on the George Washington U. football team and also chairman of the G. W. U. interfraternity council.

GLEN ECHO was in the throes of harboring a succession of visiting bands. Among these flitting maestros we recall Herbie Holmes, Little Joe Hart and Larry Funk. This was long before Manager

Peggy Leonard, dainty little singer now at the Hi Hat

Leonard Schloss had heard Paul Kain's band and decided it was what the doctor ordered.

El Patio was a cafeteria in lackadaisical '38 and Little Jack Little was touring theaters. Maestro Ralph Hawkins of Crossroads was running around the country with Artie Shaw's band and Crossroads wasn't even built.

HI HAT was recovering from a month-long contest for singers.

It ceased to be a contest when Angie Rodante polished off "St. Louis Blues" in a low-down contralto. Angie stayed at Hi Hat for a long time, only went as far away as the Ambassador Hotel offices, right upstairs, where she now does accounting work.

THE CASINO ROYAL, then Bamboo Gardens, was boasting about having the town's first girl emcee. She was a cutie-pie named Judy Acton. It's a girl emcee at C. R. all the time now. As witness Eileen George and Joan Arlen.

"Poor little woman. She'll never be able to make a go of it," people were saying about Helen Hamilton, who'd just taken over the Troika. And now look! La Hamilton has made La Troika into a nationally famed spot.

MAYFAIR WAS ROLLING ALONG with Jimmy Byrd as promotion manager. He's a sailor now. Leo's spot as seer was filled by a chic Parisienne, Countess de Bournat, remember?

Pershing Leads in Eulogies Of Bishop Freeman at Capital

Expressions of regret on Bishop Freeman's death came yesterday from Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the AEF in World War I, and leaders in other fields of endeavor.

Speaking from the Walter Reed Hospital, General Pershing, member of the National Cathedral Foundation for many years, told The Post that he considered Bishop Freeman "truly a great man, great Christian, great minister and profound thinker."

Long Acquainted

The general said he and the prelate had known each other since the latter came here in 1921 to become rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, and had heard him preach frequently from the Cathedral pulpit.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, said that, in Bishop Freeman, "the country, and Washington, in particular, had a vigorous protagonist for church unity and cooperation."

"Not only in theory, but in practice, he made the Washington Cathedral a 'house of prayer for all people,'" stated Dr. Reissig, citing the special Sunday afternoon union services sponsored by the Federation and the Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Seth R. Brooks, general chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, and of which Bishop Freeman was a past general chairman and, at his death, an honorary chairman, said:

"In the death of Bishop Freeman, the Nation and Washington have lost a spiritual leader of recognized power and consecration."

"Bishop Freeman believed in spiritual solidarity," declared Dr. Brooks, adding that "his death at this time is a serious loss to all who believe in brotherhood and goodwill."

Honored by Jewish Leader

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and member of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, said:

"The death of Bishop Freeman is a great blow to the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

"We admired him as a courageous spokesman for the right. We respected him as a mighty standard-bearer of all that was worthy in our community life. We loved him as a dear friend.

"Mine indeed was the honor to be installed by the bishop as rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, to be his host many times at our temple, and to be his guest in the Cathedral pulpit. We always considered him one of us. His name will be enshrined forever in the shrine of the House of Israel. His life was a benediction."

Silent Prayer Observed

Led by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor, and United States Senate chaplain, the congregation of Foundry Methodist Church yesterday observed a moment of silent prayer for Bishop Freeman.

Paying tribute to the prelate, his friend of many years' standing, Dr. Harris said:

"The church of Christ of every name and sign sustains an irreparable loss in the passing of Bishop Freeman. Like Phillips Brooks (renowned preacher) he was too big to be the servant of one denomination. He belonged to us all."

Catholic Expressions

The Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, director of the Catholic Charities of Washington and worker on the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, commented:

"In the death of Bishop Freeman the people of Washington mark the passing of a great gentleman, a noble citizen interested in every phase of life in the Nation's Capital and a brilliant orator ever ready to raise his voice in behalf of his fellow men. With his innumerable friends, we deeply mourn his passing."

Bishop Freeman, Builder of National Cathedral, Dies; Rites Wednesday

ing public schools of the city, he went to work. For 15 years he held various jobs in the accounting departments of several railroads, including the New York Central. That he had the makings of a good railroad executive was attested by the Central's late Chauncey M. Depew, who said that the road lost a future president when the church took Freeman.

It was the late Right Rev. Henry Cadman Potter, bishop of New York, who persuaded the then still young Freeman that his duty was with the church. He supervised his training and saw him ordained.

The bishop gave major attention in his latter years to his effort for unification of the Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches, putting his plea into writings, addresses and sermons.

Urged Union of Creeds

Last October 18 he urged immediate union between the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches, in one of the strongest statements to come from an Episcopal prelate on that issue.

"An issue has been made between the chief and coveted things of our Christian civilization and a conception of life and human government that is utterly at variance with all that we hold and believe," he said then. "There can be no compromise between good and evil.

"If these two eminently Christian bodies cannot be made to see eye to eye in such a time as this, it is practically hopeless for them to find grounds for agreement in days unmarked by disorder and strife," he warned.

He will be buried Wednesday in a crypt of the Cathedral, a neighbor in death to some of those he knew in life—among them Woodrow Wilson and Admiral George Dewey.

Funeral Rites Wednesday

Public funeral services will be conducted at 3 p. m. at the Cathedral on Mount St. Alban. The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, has been asked to officiate, but his reply had not been received at a late hour last night.

The body will lie in state all day Tuesday, and Wednesday morning, in the bishop's chapel at his house on the Close. It will be moved at 10 a. m. Wednesday to the Cathedral for Holy Communion at 10:30 a. m., lying in state until the funeral at 3 p. m., at which the full choir will sing.

Order of the procession into the Cathedral will be as follows:

General clergy from all over the Nation, District clergy, Cathedral canons, visiting bishops, active and honorary pallbearers, lay members of the Cathedral Council, executive council of the diocese, representatives of the three Cathedral schools, lay representatives at the general convention of the Episcopal Church, representatives of the Masonic order, representatives of the board of incorporation, American Red Cross, representatives of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Following the public service, there will be a private service for the family and intimates in the Chapel of the Annunciation, connected with the bishop's home.

According to Canon Wolven, the body will be interred in the crypt of the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. The Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, first bishop of hem Chapel, as is President Wood-Washington, is buried in Bethlerow Wilson. The body of the Right Rev. Alfred Harding, second bishop of Washington, rests in the Chapel of the Resurrection.

Bishop Freeman is survived by his wife; two children—Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, wife of Canon Wolven, rector of Ascension Episcopal Church here, and William V. Freeman, of this city, and four grandchildren—Army Lieutenants James Freeman Jaffray, now in North Africa, and Clyde P. Jaffray of Texas; Mrs. Earl Savage, Wayzata, Minn., and Jane Freeman of Washington.

Identified With Cathedral

The bishop's long association with and zeal for the cathedral project had identified him to the country as its builder. Actually, however, the proposal for a cathedral was incorporated in the original plans for the National Capital, drawn by George Washington and his architect, Major Pierre Charles L'Enfant. A charter for the cathedral was granted by Congress in 1893.

In the subsequent years some preliminary work was done. When Bishop Freeman was consecrated, about one-tenth of the project was completed, but contributions and work had languished. The bishop visited such friends as General Pershing, Herbert Hoover and Charles Evans Hughes, and enlisted their interest. The fund campaign grew. More than 12 million dollars had been contributed by 50,000 persons from every State in the Union when the depression set in.

With these funds the great gothic structure on St. Albans Heights, overlooking the Capital, took form. The Cathedral now is about three-fifths complete, its main unit standing surrounded by gardens, two schools and a college of preachers. To make it the American Westminster Abbey contemplated by the bishop, the nave, a south transept and a 262-foot tower must be added.

In addition to this monument in stone and masonry, he leaves a lasting imprint on the Nation's Capital through his religious teachings and his modern and liberal ideals.

He was interested in local cooperative Christian work through the Washington Federation of Churches and the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, being past general chairman and, at his death, honorary chairman of the latter organization.

First Charge at Yonkers

A little wooden chapel, St. Andrew's Memorial at Yonkers, N. Y., was his first charge. When he assumed charge there were but 40 members of the congregation. He remained for 15 years and when he left there was a membership of 1500 with property valued at $150,000.

Hollywood Inn, designed as a counter attraction to the saloon, was built by him, being his first community project. Later a wealthy parishioner built a magnificent club house for the inn at a cost of $275,000 and then endowed it with another $100,000.

It was in Yonkers that he served as a mediator in labor strikes and won the appreciation of workingmen and industrialists alike.

And then in 1910 he went to St. Mark's Parish in Minneapolis, where he remained 11 years. While there he again increased his congregation and built a church noted for its architectural beauty. Again branching out into civic work he organized the Citizens' Club, which was similar to Hollywood Inn. He and six others were the founders of the Civic and Commerce Association of Minneapolis which soon attained a membership of 5000.

During World War I he participated in the National Liberty Loan campaign at the request of William Gibbs McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, later named him personal representative in Army camps where he addressed 450,000 soldiers and traveled 7000 miles.

Rector Here in 1921

He came to Washington in 1921 as rector of the historic Church of the Epiphany, on G Street Northwest, where he remained until 1923 when he was chosen Bishop of Washington. During his charge at Epiphany the church and congregation were enlarged.

The next 20 years allowed him to give full rein to his building ability in forwarding the construction of the Washington Cathedral. When Bishop Freeman began his bishopric here the work was largely in the plaster-mold and blueprint stage.

Long Active in Capital

During his tenure of office there has been built the first wing of the Cathedral library, the entire crypt structure of the main edifice, and the three crypt chapels, the apse, the great choir, children's chapel, chapels on the main floor, the north transept, the crossing and portions of the south transept.

In addition there has been planted on the grounds 300-year-old boxwood and a huge yew tree.

He held the degrees of D. D. from Seabury Divinity School, in Minnesota, and LL. D. from Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, and Brown University, Providence.

On April 19, 1890, he married Miss Ella Vigelius of New York. In 1940 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Nazis Slash Path Across The Hague To Block Invasion

London, June 6 (AP).—Destruction rivaling the bomb-damage at Rotterdam has been wrought at The Hague by German defensive demolitions. A completely cleared belt about 600 yards wide and some 4 miles completely across the city has been cleared.

Aerial photographs just released by the Netherlands government-in-exile clearly show the great barren path, about a mile and a half in from the sea and paralleled by an antitank ditch about 75 feet wide and 25 feet deep.

Buildings were torn down and carted away. All trees were cut to give a clear field for gunfire. The cleared belt, which makes up the second main barrier for any forces approaching from the sea, just misses the Peace Palace.

Educate Nation In Foreign Policy, Yale Head Urges

New Haven, Conn., June 6 (AP).—President Charles Seymour of Yale University told a graduating class today that "the only hope of choosing a foreign policy that will insure the peace and security of the Nation lies in educating the Nation to the facts of foreign relations."

Speaking at curtailed wartime ceremonies marking the university's 242d commencement at which 262 graduate students received degrees, Dr. Seymour said:

"If the democracies in the course of the past quarter of a century have been compelled to fight two heart-breaking wars and wasted the opportunity presented to them by victory in the first, it is because the opinion that controls democratic government was completely uneducated in foreign affairs."

OPA Adviser Gilbert Defends Food Subsidies on Air Forum

In the face of a concerted attack against the Office of Price Administration's subsidy program by Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota and Tom Linder, agriculture commissioner of Georgia, Richard V. Gilbert, OPA economic adviser, yesterday maintained that "subsidies provide the cheapest method of securing necessary regulation and benefit consumers and Government."

While the OPA has already announced subsidies for butter and meat to roll back prices in accordance with the President's "hold-the-line" order, Senator Bushfield's bill to prohibit payment of these subsidies is pending in the Senate.

Addressing a Nation-wide radio audience, the American Forum of the Air was devoted to a debate of the controversial issue which might well decide the policy or even the continued existence of the Office of Price Administratoin.

"From start to finish the war program has been subsidized," J. Donald Montgomery, consumers' council, U. A. W.-C. I. O., declared, "and only now when for the first time they are to be used to roll back prices which we consumers pay subsidies are opposed."

Montgomery, who resigned from his post with the Department of Agriculture several months ago over a disagreement in policies, reiterated the unions' demand that "the Government make good on its promise to stabilize the cost of living in line with the stabilization of wages."

His view was supported by Gilbert who pointed out that the Government will spend 100 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1944 and that the prevention of a 1 per cent rise will mean an annual saving of one billion dollars to the taxpayer.

"It takes much less than a billion dollars to prevent a 1 per cent price rise," he added.

Senator Bushfield opposed the program "because it is injurious, wrong in principle and is of questionable legality."

Asserting that the rise of prices is negligible and amounts to less than 1 cent a day for the commodities which are to be subsidized, the Senator broadened his attack and called for the abolishment of the entire Office of Price Administration.

"It is time to stop these wasteful bureaucrats thumbing their noses at the American people," he said. "OPA is strangling American life with its 160,000 people on the payroll. I say abolish the whole thing."

In his defense of OPA policy, Gilbert cited British and Canadian experience in price control and declared that no rise whatever in the cost of living has been permitted in England in over two years.

Bishop Freeman

This city could scarcely have lost a more potent force for good in the community than it has lost in the death of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington. In a very real sense Bishop Freeman belonged to the entire country, for his ministry took him from Yonkers to Minneapolis before he came here, and his social and national service took him to nearly every part of the land. The last 22 years of his ministry were spent in Washington. During that time he became so much a part of the religious and civic life of the community that this city will always claim him as one of its own distinguished sons.

Bishop Freeman brought to the Capital the same Christian zeal that he had manifested elsewhere. Washington became the beneficiary of his enterprise in building beautiful churches, in instilling new spirit into religious congregations, and in promoting social work. He was never content to work within the confines of the church. His broad interests and his deep devotion to the welfare of humanity were manifested in his work among the troops during the first World War and in his editorials and books as much as in his sermons. As one of his associates said of him a few years ago, he was "permitted by the grace of God to make a notable contribution to the realization of the ideal of Christian citizenship in our time."

Three interests were particularly close to Bishop Freeman's heart. One was the building of the Washington Cathedral to which he probably contributed more than any other man. That great Gothic house of worship will stand as a monument to his untiring work since he became Bishop of Washington in 1923. The second undertaking for which he never ceased to work until death silenced him on Sunday morning was the attainment of Christian unity. Being an ardent believer in the teachings of Christ, he sought earnestly to bring the Christian churches to a closer understanding. Perhaps this partly explains his third great interest in civic affairs. His concern ran more to the social implications of Christianity than to theology, and certainly it is on that ground that the numerous denominations find their greatest common interest. No one can review the work of Bishop Freeman in any of these fields without sharply realizing that the community has sustained an irreparable loss.

Argentina's Motive

Argentina's revolution evoked a wholly expected reaction from Axis propagandists. They could think of nothing better to say about the overthrow of the Castillo government than that it had been instigated by the United States. The charge is so hollow and so palpably absurd that it is unlikely to receive any credence in the southern half of our hemisphere.

The United States has, indeed, leaned over backward to avoid even a suspicion of interference in the internal affairs of our neighbor republics. In the case of Argentina, pressures that would have been generally considered legitimate from the point of view of diplomatic usage have been avoided. Through our careful forbearance during the past decade, South Americans have come to believe in the sincerity of the Good Neighbor policy. They know that this country genuinely respects the sovereignty and independence of its neighbors.

All Latin Americans can readily see, moreover, a much simpler and more plausible explanation for the Argentine political upheaval. The Castillo government had placed all its chips on an Axis victory. It was able to remain in power only so long as its gamble appeared to have some possibility of success. The events of 1943 in North Africa, Russia, New Guinea and in the air over Germany provided a far more powerful stimulus to change than any suggestion from Washington could have done. Evidently the bulk of the Argentine army concluded that an Axis victory is no longer in the cards. Accordingly, it undertook a swift and summary liquidation of the Castillo policy.

This is an explanation which, understandably, the Axis propagandists did not see fit to broadcast. But it is an explanation which is likely to make sense to the Argentine people. Isolated in their own hemisphere while their South American neighbors were benefiting through cooperation with the United States, they could anticipate nothing but disaster from a continuance of the Castillo regime. They are now in a position to make an about-face and share in the fruits of a United Nations victory. For the motivation of this revolt one need not look beyond elementary self-interest.

Feed The Children

Food is the greatest asset which this country possesses for the implementation of the peace. Until now we have sternly refrained from using this asset to resuscitate the vanquished peoples of Europe—out of a fear that aid to them would prove aid to our enemies. But the time is at hand when we must offer them some relief. Speaking at Swarthmore the other day of the plans being laid by his Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, Governor Lehman remarked that "it well may be that the time is running out for preparations for the peace." Those words should be hung up in every department in Washington and in Congress.

We are witnessing today the deliberate starvation of a whole generation of human beings in western and southern Europe. It is upon this generation, the young men and women and the children of the conquered countries, that the future peace and stability of Europe depend. As the relief director said in his address, "Before we can talk of peace and a permanent mechanism to secure it, we must first make certain that the nations, and the men, women and children who make up the nations, are not driven by starvation and desperation to embrace ideas as horrible as those of the Axis which we are seeking to exterminate."

What has been happening to the children in France and Norway and Holland and Belgium and Greece makes a picture upon which Americans can look only with sick horror. Photographs show only the spindly legs, the misshapen bodies and distended stomachs which are the consequences of famine. They do not reveal the deterioration of mind and spirit which are inevitable accompaniments. They do not tell the bitterness which men and women feel when they see slow starvation assail and destroy their own sons and daughters.

There are more than humanitarian considerations which impel us to repair this tragedy now, while we still can. These are our allies. They will forgive us the sudden death which our air raids visit upon them because they know that these are indispensable to their liberation. But it is not so certain that they will forgive—or that they can ever surmount—the hunger which they know that we possess the means to relieve. If these people are to rise to the aid of our invading armies, they must have strength; if they are to meet the problems of peace, they must have the mental health which stems from adequate nutrition.

The ways in which their suffering can be relieved are not too complex. We have food which can be spared for them. It can be paid for through the dollar balances of the conquered countries which are impounded here. It can be transported in neutral vessels without in any way adding to the burden of our already overtaxed shipping facilities. Safe conduct for these vessels can be secured from the German government. The distribution of the food can be undertaken by the International Red Cross through Swiss and Swedish personnel.

The one critical objection lies in the risk that our enemies will seize this food for their own use or diminish the meager rations of the conquered people by an equivalent amount. The reality of that risk cannot be denied. But it can be minimized by careful supervision which the Red Cross has guaranteed to provide. If at any time we find that the food is not reaching those for whom we intend it, we can end our shipments. Then the blame will rest unequivocally upon our enemies. Practical as well as humanitarian considerations make a trial imperative. Let us, at the very least, attempt to succor the children.

V. D. Investigation

For the changed outlook in Washington's fight against venereal disease the public has to thank Representative Thomas D'Alesandro. Apparently it was his investigation as chairman of the District Public Health Subcommittee which induced the War Production Board to grant priorities for an isolation unit for venereal disease patients at Gallinger Hospital. By dramatizing the issue he secured action where there had been only inaction before. Those who regard public health as a necessity owe Mr. D'Alesandro a vote of thanks.

At the same time it should not be necessary for any member of Congress to engage in a campaign to protect the armed forces against a grave menace in the Nation's Capital. The prevalence of syphilis and gonorrhea here is nothing new. Wartime conditions have undoubtedly accentuated the spread of those diseases. But the simple fact is that they have never been properly controlled. Not many years ago the District had only one venereal disease clinic. Not so many months ago its clinics were operating with only a fraction of the sessions that were needed because funds for full use of their equipment were not available. And since the war began, the District has asked in vain for more funds to fight the scourges that are now exciting the Army and Navy. The very fact that funds and priorities for an isolation V. D. hospital were assured only after a scandalous situation had been allowed to exist unabated for months is a reproach to the system by which the District is governed.

If the full value of the D'Alesandro investigation is to be realized, however, it must lead to a closer working relationship between the local authorities and the District Committees of Congress. Dr. Ruhland and the Commissioners may well conclude from the results of this inquiry that only emphatic and well-supported demands for reform are likely to prove effective. Mr. D'Alesandro and his colleagues must also realize that the public health cannot be protected here unless influential members of Congress are willing to stand behind the local authorities and see that they get the equipment and operating funds they need.

It is not enough to expose disgraceful conditions. Dr. Ruhland and the United States Public Health Service had laid bare the syphilis menace years ago. What is needed most of all is continuous recognition of these problems in Congress. For example, the 100-bed hospital now in sight is only a beginning. More hospital beds, more clinics, more doctors and more nurses will be needed if the toll of syphilis casualties is to be sharply reduced.

Progress On Rubber

Rubber Administrator William Jeffers says that he intends to stay on his job until he gets the rubber program "wrapped up and handed back to the industry where it belongs." Although Mr. Jeffers has not accomplished all that he set out to achieve, the reputation for toughness and tenacity that put him in his present office has served him well. Plants under construction in the United States and Canada are said to have a capacity of 850,000 long tons, or 79 per cent of the original recommendations of the Baruch Committee. What is more, it is expected that all the synthetic rubber plants under construction will be in operation before the end of this year.

Mr. Jeffers' responsibility is not confined to the construction of synthetic rubber plants and production of rubber. He explains that his office must see that industry is supplied with a large number of chemicals, rubber substitutes and fabrics such as rayon and cotton cords. The rubber program must also be kept in balance with other Government programs and attention must be given to the industry's manufacturing and reclaiming equipment.

Judging from the contents of progress report No. 3, Mr. Jeffers will soon have his particular part of the rubber program "wrapped up" and ready to deliver. This does not mean that the country's rubber problem will have been completely solved. On the contrary, Mr. Jeffers says that "every American must realize that except for essential necessities rubber cannot become a generally available commodity for a long time and that extensive conservation of tires and of other rubber products must still be continued." But he does expect that the construction of rubber plants will soon cease to be a problem. The next phase of the undertaking will be to get the new plants into operation. That, as the report states, will give rise to many new kinds of problems, such as scheduling and rationing of the synthetic product, and developing the techniques of using it.

Vacant Judgeship

The appointment of Judge Bolitha J. Laws to the Emergency Court of Appeals comes in recognition of the outstanding service he has rendered in the United States District Court here. Undoubtedly Chief Justice Stone made this temporary assignment solely because of Judge Laws' achievements as a jurist. Yet it is significant that the only judge from the United States District Courts asked to sit on the Emergency Court of Appeals is a Washington man. Certainly it suggests that there is no lack of high-quality talent here when permanent judicial posts are filled.

Of much greater importance is representation of the local bar on the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which is this city's court of last resort in all except rare cases. A substantial portion of the cases decided in this court are of local origin. Yet it has not one single judge selected from the District bar. Justice Vinson's resignation to become director of economic stabilization has created a vacancy on the Court of Appeals as well as on the Emergency Court of Appeals. Appropriate as is Judge Laws' assignment to the special Emergency Court which handles OPA cases, it would be even more appropriate to name him or some other qualified Washington lawyer to the permanent Court of Appeals.

Seven past presidents of the District Bar Association will meet tonight to select three eminent lawyers whose names will be recommended to the Attorney General for consideration in connection with the Court of Appeals vacancy. We do not know who the suggested nominees will be. But we do know that there are plenty of Washington lawyers on and off the bench who are well qualified to fill this position. And we think that fairness demands representation of the District bar on the tribunal which serves as this community's court of last resort.

SPLENDOR

Who dreams of splendor? Let him pause
Before the rainbow in the gauze
The spider spun to catch the fly
And captured splendor in the sky.
Or let him see the peacock spread
His jewelled fan, or let him thread
On cobwebs of his dreams, the dew,
Or match the cardinal when it flew
Across a cloud of apple boughs
In blossom. Let him see the prows
Of the dawn's galleons drip the pearled,
Miraculous beauty of a world
Beyond his reach. Let dreams be stirred
By iridescent humming bird
Or light on wings of gossamer . . .
Then only in his mind may stir
All that is best that one may claim
Of splendor . . . dancing like a flame
From age to age, from land to land—
Till pollen-gold has brushed his hand.

Labor Regulation

By Mark Sullivan

Political Test

PASSAGE of the Connally-Smith bill by the House last week was more than the enactment of a law regulating labor unions. It was a landmark. It was the first time since the present Administration took office, more than ten years ago, that any bill having to do with labor, and resisted by labor leaders, has passed both houses of Congress.

To say this is a turning point is not to say we are in for further limitations on labor. The significance is different and much broader. It can be put this way: We have come to the end of a prolonged period, more than ten years, during which an administration in power continuously deferred to one interest in the country's economic and social structure, namely, labor. There have been such periods before, when parties and administrations have deferred to other interests. Always they have come to an end. And always the end brought a turn of the political tide, a major change in the political cycle. The pattern has repeated over and over in American and English political and legislative history. It is a pattern of alternations—one party or school of thought giving way to another, the new party holding power for a decade or so, and then in its turn giving way to the other.

SIGNIFICANCE of the Connally-Smith bill is emphasized by the circumstances in which it was passed. As it is frequently put, passage of the bill was brought about by the coal strike under Mr. John L. Lewis. But that is incorrect. It was not Congress that was changed by the coal strike—it was the Administration. For at least five years, Congress has been willing to pass measures regulating labor unions. Several times the House has done so by majorities as large as in the present case. But always the Administration has prevented complete enactment, usually by pressure exercised upon and through party leaders in the Senate. What Mr. Lewis' strike did was to make the influence of the Administration on Congress, as respects labor measures, no longer potent.

The Administration kept up its attitude to the end. As late as three weeks ago, when the Connally-Smith bill was plainly headed toward passage, after the House Committee on Military Affairs had indorsed it unanimously, the Administration tried to stop it. Secretary of Labor Perkins called to her office heads and members of several branches of the Administration and got them to unite in a letter of protest, sent to Speaker Rayburn of the House, against the Connally-Smith bill. This step by the Administration might have succeeded, as such steps have before, but for the new and greater recalcitrancy on the part of Mr. Lewis, and public resentment against it.

Even yet, friends of the Administration, and others who do not like parts of the measure, may attempt to modify it in conference between committees of the House and Senate to adjust differences in the versions of the bill passed by the two houses. And of course it is always possible for the President to veto it, though this is not expected.

THE VOTE on the bill in the House was convincing, 231 to 141. More than half the President's party voted for the bill—100 Democrats for, 89 against. Nearly two-thirds of the Republicans voted for it—139 for, 49 against. The vote suggests confidence on the part of both parties that their action will have popular support.

Next year will tell. It is the degree of popular support, in the elections of 1944, that will determine whether passage of the Connally-Smith bill is really a turn of the tide—a turning away by the public from the fundamental domestic attitude of the Administration. That fundamental attitude is an alliance with organized labor, going so far as to be almost identical with it.

The labor leaders next year will fight hard to bring about public repudiation of Congress' action, by defeat of members who voted for the bill. While the bill was pending, heads of the American Federation of Labor formally declared: "We shall endeavor to vote out of office any member of Congress who supports the bill; into this effort [we] will pour every resource at [our] command."

But if there is a real change of the political tide, an actual turning away by the country from the Administration's major domestic policy, that movement will be shared by members of labor unions (as distinct from leaders), and by unorganized labor, as much as by the country generally. It has frequently happened that leaders of labor, like leaders of other groups, have been unable to hold their forces in opposition to a basic political tide.

City Is Demolished

By Paul Schubert

Effect On The Future

A TRAVELER just returned to Sweden from Germany speaks with horror of his experience in a western German city under bombardment. The city was demolished—all of west Germany is becoming an area of ruins and devastation.

Cut off as we are from accurate news of the day-by-day picture inside Germany, we have thought of the Ruhr bombardments as seen from the air. Most of the photographs we have seen show large city areas pock-marked with bomb craters, with block after block of roofless houses.

To the Germans, the bombardment is seen from the perspective of the receiving end. All Germany must be agog with tales of the bombings. If the stories don't reach the newspapers, they are passed along in letters or by word of mouth. Dozens of German cities have been smashed to destruction.

To be on the receiving end of visible war damage is a new experience for Germany. Perhaps it will beat a lesson into the German skulls.

I REMEMBER traveling from Paris to Berlin in 1929, a little over ten years after the end of the "World" War. Half an hour or so after leaving Paris, the train entered what had been the "war zone" and from then on for most of the day, crossing France and Belgium, there were innumerable evidences of war. Shell-smashed villages had been partly repaired—the new houses were almost as eloquent as the ruins of the old, of the destructive fury of the war years. The stumps of forests laid low by artillery fire stood gaunt and ugly — the second growth was still too young to hide the past.

The train was crowded with German passengers. They stood looking out the windows with awed fascination, not saying much, conscious that they were still "foreigners" — looking at what European war meant to countries outside of Germany.

It was after dark when we reached Cologne. As we crossed the frontier into Germany the Germans seemed to expand. There was no damage on the German side of the frontier. Germany was shabby and threadbare, but relatively unscarred—whole.

Through the European wars of an entire century German troops fought on battlefields outside of Germany. France, Denmark, Belgium, Austria, Poland—one war after another saw German boots tramp across the frontiers; German wheels rumbled along the roads and railways of other lands, German cannon smashed "enemy" villages. In the war of 1914-1918 German ingenuity rigged a cannon to shoot shells into Paris from super-ranges; German Zeppelins bombed London . . .

BY CHOICE, Germans have waged war against nations so weak that the wars were swiftly won—by Germany. In 1918 Germany lost a war, having taken on a coalition that proved more than a match for the armies in field gray. But win or lose, war was something whose full meaning never registered upon the German home population—never struck "home" — because Europe's battlefield lay outside Germany and Germany never felt the full impact of war's destruction.

At long last, retribution is touching the German Reich and leaving the fiery grooves of just bombardment. Germans who found it proper to go all the way to Spain and bomb Guernica as an "experiment," are now on the receiving end of an experiment in aerial warfare that is slowly but certainly destroying the Germany that was—leaving scars on German soil, and impressing at long last a much-needed lesson of war upon the German mind.

War is ugliness and destruction. War is the curse of Europe. War spares no one who takes part in it. Germany, provoking one war after another, has never understood war, has never been humbled by war, has never realized the enormity of the German crime of invasion. Germany, mouthing pompous phrases about "heroism" and "super race of conquerors," needs to be forcibly reminded of the puniness of man. The baby who lights a match is neither discovering fire nor displaying superior prowess—but may easily burn down the house.

World weariness and world decency spared Germany from much that might have happened at the end of the last war, when a helpless Germany might have been laid waste had the conquerors been more primitive. The Versailles Treaty, long held up by the Germans as an example of harshness, was in actuality an astonishing display of moderation.

If the bombardment of Germany, now in full fury, teaches the Germans the fundamental lesson that war is hell, Europe's future may be a happier one. for these people need chastisement.

After the bombardment, the rumble of our tanks and the tread of our boots will drive home the lesson to the bitter end.

Wave Rejoinder

I'd like to answer "A Soldier's" letter in reference to the living and working conditions of the WAVES in Washington. Since you have given one WAVE'S slant on conditions, I would like the public to hear another WAVE'S story. As you numbered your "gripes," I will try to number my answers.

1. We do get only $1.50 a day for food, but the fact was not mentioned in your letter that we can get a very nice meal at work for 30 cents. If the $1.50 does not cover our meals, there is no reason why we cannot spend some of the $78.00 a month that we make. We have practically no other expenses as our living quarters are furnished. There are very few of us who have not bettered ourselves financially since joining the WAVES. Everything has been done to make our stay in Washington a pleasant one, and the officers in the Navy Department have been courteous and considerate. We work, but after all who doesn't in times like these. I have yet to talk to one WAVE who is not perfectly satisfied with her working conditions.

2. You mention about the WAVES working long hours. If a girl works 12 to 16 hour stretches, she gets extra time off. We all work approximately the same number of hours per week.

3. If a girl works after dark she is furnished a Marine Guard escort to see that she gets home safely.

4. I think the Navy has done everything possible for the girls who work on the night shift to see that their rest is not disturbed. As for the fire drills we have had only one in the past two weeks and I think that is necessary.

When your friend feels sorry for herself she had better think a little about our boys who are away from home fighting for us under conditions much worse than she'll ever have to put up with. After all, we've all joined up for one reason —to get this war over as soon as possible. If we have little hardships, they are nothing compared to the hardships that are suffered in foreign countries.

I, for one, am glad I joined the WAVES and am very proud to be a small part of the Navy.

A WAVE.

Longer Life

I have read with interest in The Post, May 29, the news item headed "Longer Life for Average Man Seen in World Food Program." It is quite true that the average length of life of the world's people can be increased even more than 10 years by an "optimum" or even a "minimum" diet, but at the present time it is not even possible to produce a minimum diet for all the people in the world.

What I am getting at is that in this news item, like in most other things today, the optimistic side is always emphasized while the real facts are soft-pedaled. This was the case after the last World War when we were supposed to have freed the world for democracy. It was the case during the economic boom of 1928 and 1929, and here it comes again riding for a fall. Practically all of our major difficulties today are due to this unbridled and rampant optimism and our failure to properly emphasize hard, cold facts.

The hard, cold facts of this world food situation are, as Dr. Thomas Parran says: While all the representatives at the food conference are agreed on an "optimum" diet, "the greatest possible increase in food production will not for decades be enough to meet the minimum adequate diet."

Another hard, cold fact which Dr. Parran did not mention is that if the peoples of the world increase anywhere near the rate they were increasing just before this war or for the 10-year period 1931-1940, world society hasn't a ghost of a chance to produce even the "minimum" nutrition. Yet do any of our postwar planners or any of our newspapers even mention this problem? No. That is a tough problem, and we like to play around with easy problems that we can push over and make ourselves believe that everything is love and kisses.

During the 10-year period 1931-1940 the population of one country, India, increased 50 million people. This is a larger number of people than the entire population of Great Britain, yet it took Mother India only 10 years to increase by this number, notwithstanding the fact that India has one of the highest death rates in the world and that the average length of life of her people is only 27 years, compared with more than 60 years in the U. S. A. and Great Britain.

During this same 10-year period the inhabitants of the earth increased 200 million, which is more people than the total populations of the U. S. A. and Great Britain combined, with Canada thrown in for good measure. To feed the three-quarters of the earth's people who are now underfed and at the same time to feed an additional 200 million every 10 years, or even half this great number, is some little problem, yet our postwar planners and great statesmen are as quiet as a mouse about this problem. The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Busy Bee

(With apologies)

How doth the busy little bee
Improve each shining hour!
(A little cautious of the loss
In prestige and in pow'r);
How skillfully she builds her cell!
How neat she spreads the wax!
(She hears no orators proclaim
The working right she lacks).

II

She has the day's task well in hand
Before the sun is high
(She doesn't fear a dozen boards
Will ask her how and why);
To set a high mark is her aim,
No second does she waste
(It seems there aren't any rules
To regulate her haste)!

III

She hurries through the daily stint
With happiness sublime
(No one has warned her of the blight
(Of working overtime);
She penetrates a bloom with speed
And with amazing zeal;
(There are no arbitrators with Conclusions to appeal).

IV

She works her darndest all the day
And ne'er says bitterly,
"This honey project is all right,
But what's it getting ME!"
She flies from petal to the hive,
Unstinted are her flights;
She's far too busy to debate
The question of her rights.

V

In works of labor and of skill
She's steady, true and fit
(There are no pompous bees around
To tell her when to quit);
She never knew a walkout call
Nor heard a leader's plea;
She never had to tote a sign
And be a picket bee!

VI

She's working in the garden now,
In summer's hot sunshine;
She's not been told those flowers are
A bee's production line;
How doth the busy little bee
Pursue this workday tough!
(She doesn't seem to know that this Is such old-fashioned stuff).

Those Roosevelt-Stalin Notes

What was in the note President Roosevelt sent by special envoy to Josef Stalin? And what's in the note Joe is sending back to the President? These are two questions which have the country guessing. Everybody assumes matters of tremendous importance are involved. But Elmer Twitchell says he has inside dope that all the note from Franklin to Joe said was:

Dear Josef:
What's cooking? F. D. R.

* * * *

There is also much speculation regarding what is in the Stalin note to Mr. Roosevelt. We have a hunch it may just say:

My dear Franklin:
How'm I doing? JOE.

Axis Viewpoint

(Hitler and Mussolini, denouncing aerial warfare, call Americans bombing gangsters.)

A bomber is a wondrous thing
As bombs it freely showers—
Provided that it is, of course,
A bomber that is OURS!

A bombing blitz is splendid war—
Its purpose we defend—
With other people and not us
On the receiving end.

Soldier's Income Tax

According to my understanding of the present proposed income tax bill, men in the armed forces since December, 1942, and who made a sizable income in 1942, will be required to pay 100 per cent of their taxes on that year, and be "forgiven" 75 per cent of this year's taxes, because they will naturally have a smaller income in 1943. It is impossible for a doctor to pay his 1942 tax bill out of his soldier's pay in 1943, and this is also true for thousands of other individuals who were patriotic enough to join the armed forces.

It seems to me to be most unjust to penalize servicemen and allow those who stay at home to get on a pay-as-you-go basis with a 75 per cent cancellation, without making some provision for the men in the armed forces.

Voting "Privilege"

In regard to Henry P. Taylor's letter in today's Post, I would like to point out that voting is not a "privilege," as he claims, but a right and a duty of all citizens. To restrict this right to those who can pay for it is definitely in line with the totalitarian procedure, and should not be permitted in a democratic state. Therefore, in my opinion, Congress has the right to revoke existing State laws in order to conform to the principles of democracy for which we are fighting today.

Argentine Revolution

By Ernest K. Lindley

Army Seeks A Comeback

ALL THE causes and motives of the Argentine coup d'etat are not yet clear. It was led by strongly nationalist army officers closely identified with the Conservative Party, some of them even with the Castillo regime which they deposed. General Ramirez was Castillo's Minister of War. General Rawson was chief of cavalry, General Tonazzi, former Minister of War, belonged to the Justo faction of the Conservative Party. (The late former President Justo had strongly advocated the severance of diplomatic relations with the Axis and, to demonstrate his own sympathy with the Allied cause, had offered his services as a general in the Brazilian army.)

LINDLEY

Factional and personal rivalries may have influenced leaders of the revolt. But it would appear that an important cause of their dissatisfaction, if not the dominating one, was the foreign policy of Castillo—and possibly the policy which they expected from Castillo's choice as the Conservative nominee to succeed him to the presidency. This, at least, is the first big inducement they have to offer to the people of Argentina to lend the new government popular support. For all tests have indicated that the Argentine people overwhelmingly have opposed Castillo's policy and have favored instead the alignment of Argentina with the rest of the Western Hemisphere against the Axis.

The leaders of the coup apparently were moved by extremely practical national considerations. Castillo's stubborn isolationism had severely damaged Argentina's prestige. That was a heavy blow to men who envisaged Argentina as the natural leader of Latin America.

Castillo's policy also had the effect of depriving the Argentine army of lend-lease arms from the United States. The generals could see the power of Brazil and of Chile rising week by week.

BRAZIL has been Argentina's traditional rival for Latin-American leadership. Brazil is larger, more populous, and contains much greater resources. The war is accelerating the development of these resources. Brazil is on her way to becoming an economic giant. And her army, air forces, and navy are growing and being modernized with American aid. Chile, although far weaker than either Brazil or Argentina, has been growing in strength. Even before Chile broke with the Axis, some American arms were sent to Chile to help protect the mines and ports against possible Japanese raids and in anticipation of Chile's eventual formal alignment with the United States. Even little Uruguay, across the River Plate from Argentina, has been getting stronger.

When the American republics met at Rio in January, 1942, an Argentine military mission was in Washington seeking arms and the loan of military advisers. Excepting Argentina and Chile, the resolve to honor the Pan-American commitment to aid any American nation attacked by a non-American nation was unanimous. All the other nations broke diplomatic relations with the Axis promptly and some went further by declaring war.

In the hope of obtaining a united front, a compromise resolution "recommending" a break with the Axis was brought forward. Argentina accepted it and Chile followed suit. Argentina may have been moved by the hope of assuring success for its military mission in Washington. But Argentina was informed she could receive no arms until her government lived up to its commitments, broke relations with the Axis, and resisted German attacks on Argentine ships.

Castillo, a man of limited horizon and exaggerated notion of Argentina's power, stood fast. He had also an exaggerated notion of the power of the Axis. He was playing for a stalemate, which he thought would leave Argentina sitting pretty. In this appraisal he had some support from within the Argentine army, as well as among some of the wealthy landlords and other right-wing groups.

BUT THE course of the war made it evident, to the military men at least, that the Argentine government had sized up the war very badly and that it was time to leap on the Allied bandwagon. Castillo was too deply committed to switch. There was conjecture that a switch would be made by his successor, to be elected in September. (As the Conservative Party controls the election machinery in the rural districts, and as the chief opposing parties, the Radicals and the Socialists, have had difficulty in getting together, it was generally assumed that the Conservative candidate would be elected). But the leaders of the coup may have believed that the prospective Conservative nominee would be slow about correcting Argentina's foreign policy. Or they may have thought Argentina would be left out in the cold permanently if the change awaited the election and inauguration of a new government.

Whether the new government will rule indefinitely as a military junta or whether it will permit elections to be held remains to be disclosed. To meet the standing requirements of the United States for recognition, the new government will have to show that it can maintain order and that it has effective control of government services. Also, it will have to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis and fulfill Argentina's other commitments under the Pan-American declarations to which she has subscribed.

The new regime may be able to repair in part the damage done to Argentina by Castillo. But a mere break in diplomatic relations would not put Argentina on a par with Brazil or Mexico, who are our full-fledged fighting partners, and became such when a United Nations victory was not quite so obvious as it is today.

Financial Fate of OPA, OWI At Stake in Pending Fund Bills

By the Associated Press

The financial future of some of the Administration's war agencies, including the Office of Price Administration and War Information, is at stake in appropriation bills scheduled for congressional action soon.

Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri of the House Appropriations Committee said yesterday that he looks for little oppposition to the pending 72-billion-dollar request for War Department funds but trouble looms for the 3-billion-dollar appropriation measure for various war agencies, including the OPA, OWI, Manpower Commission and Board of Economic Warfare.

Many of these agencies have undergone congressional criticism in recent weeks from the House floor and in committees, complaints being directed at both policies and personnel. The expectation is that the critics will translate complaints into action when the appropriation measure reaches the floor, probably in about ten days.

An Appropriations Subcommittee put finishing touches on the 72-billion-dollar war appropriations measure over the weekend, making it ready for turning over to the full committee and the House within a few days.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, meanwhile, set to work on nearly 35 billion dollars of other appropriation measures. Awaiting disposition on the Senate side are a number of money bills which include:

Navy Department, $24,850,000,000; Lend-Lease, $6,273,000,000; Independent Offices, $2,621,000,000; Treasury-Postoffice, $1,102,000,000; Legislative-Judiciary, 40 million dollars.

The last four, passed in different forms by the two congressional branches, are being considered by joint Senate-House conference committes, but the record Navy supply measure was approved by the Appropriations Committee only Saturday. Acting Chairman McKellar (Democrat) Tennessee, of the Appropriations Committee, was optimistic about the chance of passing the Navy bill early in the week, along with a smaller but far more controversial measure, the 820-million-dollar Agriculture appropriation bill.

The Senate appropriations group restored funds for the Farm Security Administration which had been eliminated by the House, and granted 400 million dollars instead of 300 million dollars for soil conservation payments. Debate is anticipated on both points in the Senate, probably followed by an extended controversy when the bill goes to a conference committee for adjustment of differences.

Giant Plane Being Built

Kaiser-Hughes Project

The giant experimental flying boat which Henry J. Kaiser and Howard Hughes are building on the West Coast will be an all-plywood craft powered by eight engines and capable of carrying 60 tons of cargo.

These and other details about the plane, reputed to be the largest aircraft under construction anywhere, were disclosed yesterday by the Office of War Information in its air transport report.

Officially designated as the HK-1, the flying boat will have a gross weight of 400,000 pounds. Other details as reported by OWI:

Full capacity, 8000 gallons; average cruising speed, 174 miles an hour; wing spread, 320 feet; length, 218 feet.

By way of contrast, the two-engine DC-3, widely used by air lines and the military services, has a wing spread of 123 feet, length 64½ feet.

Constellation Reported On

The report also gave considerable detail about the Lockheed Constellation (C-69), originally designed as a long-range passenger transport and now being tested as a troop carrier.

Equipped with four 2200-horsepower engines, the Constellation has a pressureized cabin for flying above 20,000 feet. Average cruising speed is 255 miles at sea level, increasing to 300 at 19,000 feet.

With a gross weight of 73,500 pounds and fuel capacity of 4800 gallons, the Constellation is designed to carry 55 passengers, at altitudes of 30,000 to 35,000 feet, at a higher speed than is reached by a Japanese Zero pursuit plane.

The Constellation, largest American land plane yet built, will operate at 25,000 feet with three engines, and at 16,500 feet with only two.

The Martin Mars flying boat (Navy JRM-1), described as probably the largest aircraft in existence, has been converted for cargo use, with a loading track and large hatches, OWI disclosed. The Mars originally was built as a Navy patrol bomber. It has four 18-cylinder Wright engines of "over 2000 horsepower" each, 3-bladed propellers, and gross weight of 140,000 pounds. Fuel capacity is "about a tankcar load;" wing spread 200 feet; length 117 feet 3 inches.

Two Newcomers

Two relative newcomers, designed for commercial passenger operation, but diverted to military use before being used commercially, are the Douglas DC-4 Skymaster and the Curtiss-Wright Commando.

The Skymaster (Army C-54 as passenger transport; C-54A as cargo carrier; Navy, R5D), is more than twice as large as the DC-3 and was designed to carry 42 passengers in commercial operations up to 1000 miles. It now carries 26 on overseas flights. It will carry 54 hospital litters, or a light tank, or a heavy truck.

The four-engine Skymaster, with an average cruising speed of 200 miles, has a cargo capacity of 7 tons, gross weight of 65,000 pounds and fuel capacity of 3700 gallons.

"The DC-4 is considered to be the most efficient plane for over 1500-mile and transoceanic operations," OWI said. "It is supplanting the C-87 (Liberator express) as a long range cargo and passenger carrier."

The Commando (C-46) "now is considered the most efficient two-engine cargo carriers for hops under 1500-miles," OWI said. It carries 40 paratroops, or several jeeps or two light tanks of 4000 pounds each.

Equipped with Pratt & Whitney 2000-horsepower engines, the Commando has pay load capacity of 10,000 pounds on a 1000-mile flight.

Among the planes being flight tested is the Curtiss-Wright Caravan (C-76), constructed entirely of plywood and designed primarily for short-route cargo operations. Subcontractors helping to build this two-engine plane include a Virginia plastics firm, a piano company in Ohio, and a Kentucky plant which has manufactured tobacco hogsheads, Army bunks and truck bodies.

Planes listed as "not yet in the flight-test stage" included the Waco C-62, an all-wood two-engine plane of 33,500 pounds gross weight, and the Fairchild C-82, a part metal, 50,000-pound cargo plane with a rear door that can be lowered as a ramp and with an interior hoist.

The Balkan Line-Up

By Kosta Todorov

How They Ran In 1915-1918

(Second of a Series)

As I said in my first article, the present European war, like the last, may be decided in the Balkans. The geographical factor is constant. But the military and political factors differ considerably from those of 1915-1918.

In the last war the Allies established a front in Macedonia in 1915, using Salonika as a base. Germany then invaded the two Balkan allies of the Entente, Serbia and Rumania. Germany's two Balkan allies, Bulgaria and Turkey, fought the Salonika army. Greece at first remained neutral, but pro-German attitude of King Constantine created difficulties for the Allies.

Today Bulgaria is once more Germany's ally—but this time nonbelligerent. Rumania, which opposed Germany in the last war, is now fighting beside the Axis. Yugoslavia and Greece are in German hands. Turkey, which fought the last war on Germany's side, is today a nonbelligerent ally of Great Britain.

In this war as in the last, political action must precede military operations if these are to succeed. The French General Sarrail, who commanded the Allied army in Salonika from 1915 to 1917, was equally able politically and strategically. I had occasion to learn at first hand something of his careful preparation for Allied action in that theater.

Peace Offer to Bulgaria

In 1916 he entrused to me the mission of getting through the Bulgarian lines with an Allied offer of peace to the Bulgarian general staff. Had the Bulgarian army accepted the Allied terms and permitted General Sarrail's forces to pass through Bulgaria, the war would have been greatly shortened and Bulgaria spared the humiliation of sharing in the defeat of its hated allies, the Germans.

In Greece, General Sarrail's diplomacy succeeded. It provoked the Venizelist movement against King Constantine which drove the King into exile and brought Greece into the war on the side of the Allies.

Today the political and strategical problem facing the Allies is more complicated. It is not a problem of holding and improving a position, but of creating one. To this end Allied diplomatic action must be directed chiefly to Turkey and Bulgaria.

Turkey must be persuaded to become a belligerent Ally of the United Nations. Its active cooperation would provide them with a military base of tremendous importance, an Army of one million men, and a line of communication through Turkish territory for their troops and supplies in the Near East. In short, Turkish belligerency would open for the Allies a road into Europe.

Bulgarian Problem

But lying across this road is Bulgaria, with its well-equipped and well-disciplined army of 800,000 men. Here the problem confronting the Allies resembles that offered by Greece in the last war. The King and his government are openly pro-German, while the people are violently anti-German. The fact that more than a thousand officers and soldiers have been sentenced to death in the past two years indicates that the army, too, is against the Nazis.

Moreover, it is significant that King Boris has not only not dared yield to Hitler's urgent demands for military aid against Russia, but that he still maintains relations with the Soviet Union. This policy reflects the sentiment not of the King but of the people and the army. The Bulgarian people and the Bulgarian army are pro-Russian, pro-Slavonic, and pro-American.

For two years Bulgaria has been virtually occupied by Germany. And the phenomena of occupation do not differ from those in other occupied countries. The Germans, as in the previous war, seize Bulgarian food for shipment to Germany, leaving the Bulgarians hungry. There have been mass arrests and executions. Some 20,000 Bulgarians are in concentration camps.

No wonder the Bulgarians violently detest not only their Nazi "allies" but also King Boris and his gang, who treasonably surrendered the country to Hitler. And no wonder that in Bulgaria as in Yugoslavia there is constantly sabotage of German communications, and guerilla warfare in the mountains against both the German and the Bulgarian government. The May Day riots so widely publicized in the world press were unusual in nothing but degree. Unrest is constantly expressed in sporadic uprisings repressed with ruthless brutality.

Allied Opportunity

Here is a situation which can be highly favorable to the United Nations; a situation which they can and must exploit if they wish to invade the Balkans successfully. It warrants the hope that not only the Bulgarian people but even the army may refuse to oppes them or may even pass over to their side.

But this hope can be realizzed only if the Allies, through every means of communication open to them, assure the Bulgarian people that there is no question of any permanent alienation of Bulgarian territory to Turkey or any other Balkan, state—except,, of course, those territories forcibly annexed to Bulgaria during Nazzi occupation of the Balkans. Any threat to Bulgarian territory would automatically provoke an uprising of the Bulgarian people against Turkey and the United Nations.

In that case, we might even see Allied invasion of the Balkans forestalled by a German invasion of Turkey with Bulgarian aid, threatening the Near East and preventing the Allies from opening an European Front.

This would be a terrible price for Turkey and the United Nations to pay for any possible bargaining with Bulgarian interests. Turkey has no need of Bulgarian territory indeed, Kemal Ataturck renounced all territorial ambitions in Europe. Turkey's sufficient reward for cooperatoin with the United Nations would be security against the threat of German invasion which will remain suspended over it as long as Hitler is undefeated.

No Turks Are Leading Invasion

Because of the traditional Turkish-Bulgarian rivalry the Turkish army, as an additional guarantee of Allied good faith, should not appear at the head of the invading troops. The vanguard should be American, with one or two Russian divisions if possible—but not more, because the Turks fear Russia.

Moreover, the Allies must be prepared to attack in great force. In spite of its reverses in Russia and North Africa, Germany is still very strong. And it would enjoy the immense advantage of short lines of communication.

Knowing the excellent quality of the Bulgarian army, with its strong aviation and its several motorized divisions, I believe it would be folly for the Allies to risk any attack through the Balkans without previously careful political preparation along the lines I have suggested. If this army can be won over to the Allies, Germany's situation in the Balkans will at once become desperate. With Bulgarian aid, and that of the Turkish army and the Yugoslav forces of General Mihailovich, the Allies could expel Germany from the Balkans in a few weeks.

To Be Continued.

W. and M. Graduates Hear Justice Douglas at Exercises

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., June 6.—Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court told the graduating class of the College of William and Mary tonight at exercises at which he received an honorary doctorate of laws that "you who are in command tomorrow will not be satisfied with the liberalism of today."

Rather, he said to the 156 graduates of the 250-year-old institution, "you will want to fashion your own progressive democracy to meet the postwar needs."

Justice Douglas expressed a hope that when the future leaders chose their brand of liberalism "they select an American brand and do not undertake to import one" because "a liberalism which comes from this soil will have a genuine native flavor." And he added:

"The American tradition is strong in its respect for the individual and his liberty. The American tradition rates common sense higher than theory. The American tradition gives first place to economic opportunity, individual initiative, and fair play.

Nazi Youth As Peace Aid

Wallace Offers Idea

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., June 6.—Vice President Henry A. Wallace today told members of the Connecticut College for Women graduating class, which included his daughter, Jean, that when the war is won, "we must appeal to the Axis youth, especially the German youth," for cooperation in framing world peace.

Wallace, whose commencement address was applauded so long after its conclusion that he was forced to acknowledge it with a smile and a bow, said:

"I believe that in the prevention of World War III—in keeping faith with the boys who have given their lives—much will depend on just how we handle the German youth immediately following this war."

He spoke in a packed 1300-seat auditorium on the college campus overlooking historic Thames River, after being presented by President Katharine Blunt, who said that the college felt honored that he had given "us his daughter for four years." Later, when Jean received her degree, the Vice President beamed.

At the conclusion of the last war, Wallace said, the Allies "provided no incentive for education in democratic traditions" and so German youth "fell into the hands of retired army generals, monarchist professors and politicians." Thus, he said, "the way was prepared for Hitler and Goebbels to return German education to the teaching of racial superiority, war and death.

"We must not repeat the mistakes made by the Allies after World War I," he added. "This time we must see that the defeat of Germany is complete. The Germans themselves will probably wreak vengeance on their Nazi overlords. In any event, we must see that the guilty are punished."

Kermit Roosevelt Probably Will Be Buried in Alaska

By the Associated Press

Maj. Kermit Roosevelt probably will be buried in Alaska where he died June 4.

This was indicated by wartime custom, which calls for burial of members of armed forces overseas until after the war, when bodies can be returned to the United States.

The death of the 33-year-old son of Theodore Roosevelt was announced by the War Department yesterday. The wording of the announcement indicated that he probably died from natural causes.

Two other sons of the former President now are on active duty with the Army. They are Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., in North Africa, and Maj. Archibald Roosevelt in the Pacific area. A fourth son, Quentin Roosevelt, died in action in the first World War while serving as a flier.

OPA Seeks to Increase Canning By Raising Wholesalers' Points

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

To encourage canners to put up "every ounce of fruits and vegetables possible," the Office of Price Administration yesterday increased the point working capital of wholesalers and urged them to place their orders.

Canners no longer will be restricted in the amount of goods they can ship and so can keep their warehouses with room for new packs.

Kenneth Stauffer, chief of the OPA's processed food division, said the civilian supply of canned goods this year would be approximately 75 per cent of that for 1942. The pack for June will not quite equal consumption for the month, he said, owing to poor crop conditions during early spring.

A carryover supply of 30 million cans from the 1942 canning will be on hand July 1, he estimated, but OPA has scheduled 1943 movements so only 20 million cans will be on hand next year.

Jean Carroll, assistant director of the division, said the industry could make the new point inventory system work satisfactorily if wholesalers would buy "a balanced supply" and not concentrate on a few items, and if canners would be sure the wholesalers to whom they sold had a sufficient number of points to take up their orders.

The "unbalanced" buying of wholesalers in some parts of the country has resulted in scarcity of some canned products in specific areas, it was said.

Stauffer said he did not consider the supply of canned goods available this year would call for any considerable shifting in consumer point values.

Yanks, Nats Sweep Double-Headers

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We make use of that convenient character, A. Spokesman, to relate what has happened to the Detroit Tigers, once the most bountiful club in the major leagues and now a strangely economical outfit.

POVICH

"They gave Steve O'Neill the manager's job and have been no inspiration to him ever since with their frugal tactics," says our spokesman. "The front office is operating with strange thrift when it is still the richest club in baseball. O'Neill has only eight pitchers. Minor league clubs have more than that."

There's no handy explanation for the Tigers' amazing about-face. The club is still owned by Walter O. Briggs, sr., who in his time was the most generous club owner in the majors. Contrary to the general impression, Briggs has not completely forsaken baseball to give all his time to his war-tank factories. He still sees a lot of the Tigers' front office.

Briggs is the man who used to get so enthused over the pitching of Buck Newsom for the Tigers that he'd invite Newsom into his office for a $5000 bonus. He took pleasure in admitting that he paid Newsom as much as $40,000 for a single season.

Most every ball player yearned to be with the Tigers. Until a couple of years ago, they were the best-paying club in the league. A coach with the Tigers has earned as much as $15,000 for a single season in contrast to the average coach's pay scale of $4000 a year.

"Nothing was ever too good for the Tigers," relates our informant. "One trainer wasn't enough. Mr. Briggs gave them a Swedish masseur, too. Everything was strictly de luxe. Briggs put in a sprinkler system to keep the field from getting too hard and dry. The Tigers' training camp in Florida oozed swank. Those were the wonderful days.

"The retrenchment started last season, and there weren't any halfway measures. The contracts sent out by Jack Zeller, the general manager, called for a blanket 40 per cent cut of all players salaries. Zeller fired eight of the team's ten scouts. When Catcher Billy Sullivan squawked about taking that 40 per cent pay cut, Zeller traded him to Brooklyn.

"During the past winter, Zeller sold Pitcher Charley Fuchs to the Phils for the $7500 waiver price. Mr. Briggs needs that $7500 about as much as Hitler needs a third front, but it was strictly a cash deal. Fuchs is a pitcher that O'Neill could use now, but the Detroit manager never has much to say about who comes or goes on the Detroit club.

"That's why Mickey Cochrane eventually was fired by the front office after winning two pennants for the Tigers. They made him general manager of the club and Mickey thought that some authority went with the job. When Cochrane found out he had taken too much for granted, he began to fall out with the powers.

"Del Baker got along all right because he never had any front-office aspirations. O'Neill doesn't give a hoot about anything besides authority on the field, either, and he'll do all right in his place.

"I wouldn't doubt that the Tigers, who used to be the highest-salaried team in baseball, are now the lowest paid. Rudy York is tops, and I doubt if he gets more than $12,000 a year. They promised York a $5000 bonus if he batted in 100 runs last year. He drove in 90, and got no bonus. They didn't tell he made a good try and sweeten the kitty for him, even a little bit. The Detroit front office these days is strictly business."

Lefty Gomez relates how he talked contract with General Manager John Quinn of the Braves, when he signed with that club as a free agent last winter after being released by the Yankees.

"When I walked into Mr. Quinn's office, he asked me what I thought my salary should be. I told him I was coming over to the National League after ten years with the Yankees, and that I expected the usual increase.

"'What do you mean, the usual increase,'" Mr. Quinn asked.

"Well," I told him, "you people have been saying for years that the National League is a faster league than the American and when a player moves into a better league why, you know, he automatically gets a 25 per cent raise."

Gomez got no raise. "But it wasn't a total loss," said Lefty. "I made him smile."

A's Take First, 12-5; Indians Win 2nd, 5-0

Philadelphia, June 6 (INS).—The Athletics split even with the Cleveland Indians in a doubleheader today, winning the first game 12 to 5, and then suffering a four-hit shutout by Jack Salveson, 5 to 0. Salveson, Lou Boudreau and Roy Cullenbine hit homers in the second game.

The A's, trailing by 5 to 3 in the first encounter, knocked out Allie Reynolds and Chubby Dean with a four-hit attack in the seventh inning and then scored six times against Joe Heving in the eighth. Tookie Everett Fagan got credit for the victory in the wild struggle.

After scoring three runs on homers in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings of the night cap, the Indians got another pair of counters against Roger Wolff in the eighth when Boudreau walked, Cullenbine singled and Jeff Heath's single through Jim Tyack for a two-base error.

Fisher, Sacramento Club Owner, Dies

San Francisco, June 6 (AP).—Michael Angelo Fisher, 81, who as owner of the Sacramento club was a founder of the Pacific Coast baseball league, died today after an illness of two weeks.

An old friend of Connie Mack, he played against the Philadelphia Athletics' octogenarian leader when Mack toured the West with all-star barnstorming teams in the last century.

N. Y. Holds League Lead By Winning

Browns Beaten, 2-1, In 11 Innings, Lose Second, 10-6; Two Homers for Lindell

By the Associated Press

New York, June 6.—The New York Yankees kept their grip on the American League lead today by stopping the St. Louis Browns in both ends of a double-header, 2 to 1 in 11 innings, and 10 to 6, before a crowd of 33,236 paying customers.

The first affair was the seventh extra-inning game in the last eight contests for the beleagured Brownies and it was decided on three singles in the eleventh after Lefty Al Hollingsworth and Atley Donald had staged an almost airtight hurling duel up to that point.

Donald gave up six scattered hits, five of which were divided between Mike Chartak and Milt Byrnes, but the only one that counted was a homer by Chartak in the seventh for the first score of the game. In the eighth, George Stirnweiss walked, moved to second on an infield out and scored on a single by John Lindell.

Joe Gordon opened the eleventh with a single and went to second as Chet Laabs fumbled the ball. An infield hit by Nick Etten moved him to third and another single by Bill Johnson brought him home with the deciding run.

The Yankees easily captured the second game with a display of power that included two home runs, each with a man on base, by Lindell; and another by Etten, who made four hits. Together Etten and Lindell drove in eight runs and allowed Hank Borowy to coast to his third victory, although he gave up one cluster of three runs in the second inning and another trio in the ninth.

Pirates Sweep Giants, 18 to 1 And Then 7-0

Pittsburgh, June 6 (INS).—The Pirates gave the New York Giants two decisive pastings today, 18 to 1 and 7 to 0, with almost 22,000 fans looking on.

Pittsburgh fans saw one of the greatest batting shows in the history of Forbes Field in the early game as the Pirates made 18 hits to account for as many tallies. The slugging included a cleanup homer by Huck Geary, four three-baggers and two doubles.

Jack Hallet was too good for the Giants in the nightcap, shutting the scoring door in their faces as he held them to four hits. Tommy O'Brien made seven hits in a row in the dual bill. He had a triple, a double and three singles in the early fight and then ran his consecutive string to seven hits as he made a double and a triple in his first two tries in the second contest.

Reds Conquer Braves, 4 to 3, In 14 Innings

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 6.—The Cincinnati Reds outlasted the Boston Braves in a 14-inning struggle in the first half of a scheduled double bill today, to win 4 to 3 before weather conditions called a halt to the second game in the first half of the first inning.

It was the first Sunday game the Reds have won this year.

First man up in the last half of the ninth, big Frank McCormick, Red first baseman, hit a long ball which landed on top of the left field fence, bounced high, and fell on the knotholers' side of the enclosure to tie the score.

From then on until the last half of the fourteenth it was a pitcher's game with Andrews the first to wilt. Walker, first up for the Reds, doubled, McCormick was passed and Mesner bunted with all hands safe when a fielder's choice throw to third was late. After Eric Tipton bounced forcing Walker at the plate, Eddie Miller, Cincinnati shortsop, got his third single of the game to score McCormick with the winning run.

Bosox Take 2 From Chicago, 4-3 and 3-2

Boston, June 6 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox took both ends of a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox today, 4-3 and 3-2, coming from behind in each game after losing three straight in single engagement with the Chicago team.

The Red Hose put on a three-run splurge in the ninth inning to win the opening tilt. Chicago was leading 3-1 when Orval Grove walked Pete Fox, who went to third on Tony Lupien's single. Joe Haynes came in to relieve Grove but Jim Tabor's long fly sent Fox home. Bobby Doerr beat out a bunt and Roy Partee and "Skeeter" Newsome singled in succession to score the tying and winning runs.

Dodgers, Cubs Split Before 30,360 Fans

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 6.—The Brooklyn Dodgers remained a half-game behind the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals today by splitting a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs before a crowd of 30,360, largest turnout in the Windy City this season.

The Bums wrung out a 4-to-3 win the 11-inning opener then took a 11-to-5 trimming in the afterpiece.

Max Macon got his sixth victory of the season in the extended first game when he singled to drive Augie Galan home with the clinching run. The Cubs failed to retaliate in their half of the eleventh when Lou Novikoff tapped into a double play after Bill Nicholson had singled with one down.

Whit Wyatt allowed only four hits in seven and one-third innings before being relieved by Macon in a move of strategy by Manager Leo Durocher. Macon relinquished only one hit.

The Cubs scored three runs on as many hits in the first inning, including a triple with the bases loaded by Don Dallesandro. But the National League tailenders didn't get a man on base off Wyatt after that splurge until Eddie Stanky walked in the sixth.

The Dodgers scored twice in the first frame and then tied the count in the third on singles by Arky Vaughn and Dixie Walker and Billy Herman's force-out.

Claude Passeau went the route for the Cubs and gave up eight hits.

The Chicagoans collected 14 blows in the second game, bunching five runs in the fourth, four in the sixth and two in the eighth. Curt Davis was the victim of the five-run spree in the fourth. He was followed by Rube Melton, Kirby Higbe and Les Webber.

Wilson High Meets Eastern Today in School Title Game

The interhigh baseball championship series opens today at Wilson High School with Eastern visiting in the first of a best two out of three series. Game time is 4 o'clock. Wilson will visit Eastern Wednesday and a third game, if necessary, will be played on a neutral field.

Eastern finished on top of the regular season standings, losing only to Wilson by 10-3. Wilson lost its two games before Jack Ogle was in condition to pitch and Ogle then pitched them into the playoffs.

Ogle will probably go back to the mound today after pitching his team into the final playoffs after breaking a second place tie by beating Tech last Friday. Eastern has three starting hurlers, Stan Pohutsky, Dave Leonarduzzi and Clint Spicer with Pohutsky the probable starter today.

Cards, Phillies Tie, 1-1, Musial Goes Hitless

St. Louis, June 6 (AP).—Stan Musial's hitting streak was broken today after 22 consecutive games in an abreviated contest between the World Champion Cardinals and Philadelphia which was called after five innings with the score tied, 1 to 1. The second game of a scheduled doubleheader was postponed.

The Phillies were blasting Young Harry Brecheen's offerings all over the lot in the first half of the sixth when time was called. They had scored two runs, had men on second and third and none out. But as the affair was called off the count reverted back to the end of the fifth inning with the score tied 1 to 1.

Danny Murtaugh walked to start the game. Ron Northey singled him to third and when Center Fielder Harry Walker fumbled the ball, Murtaugh streaked home.

The Redbirds came back in the second to match the count on a walk, single and a force play.

Alton Willett Wins Schoolboy Golf Crown Second Time

Mt. Vernon's Hammond Is Beaten, 2 & 1

Bethesda Senior Defeats Appleby In Morning Clash; Regains Post Cup

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

A three-hole winning streak in the late stages of the Metropolitan Schoolboy final at Manor Club yesterday earned Bethesda High School's Alton Willett his second title with a 2-and-1 triumph over Gordon Hammond, jr., of Mount Vernon.

All even with four to play and with the fifteenth hole apparently in Hammond's hands, Willett suddenly whipped an approach shot from the deep rough and dropped a 6-foot putt to win the hole as Hammond flubbed two straight chip shots. That was the turning point as the lanky Bethesda senior won the next two holes and the match although he was not playing his usual game, scoring an approximate 82.

Presented Post Trophy

Frank Emmet, through whose efforts the tournament was played for the tenth consecutive year, presented The Washington Post trophy to Willett, who joins Billy Shea, the former Western High and Georgetown University linksman, now an FBI agent, as two time champion. Willett received a replica from The Post while he also received the medalist's prize for his 71 at Indian Spring and Hammond was awarded the runner-up trophy, the latter prizes for the schoolboy association.

Willett advanced to the final with a morning round victory over Bob Appleby, of Wilson High, by 6 and 4. Willett was 3 up at the turn, lost the tenth hole and won the next four, playing the round out for a 76. Hammond defeated Buddy Brylawski, St. Alban's, 3 and 2, holding to a 3-up lead at the turn when Brylawski was in the woods on all holes but the par threes on the front nine.

Willett and Hammond were both scrambling in the finals through the first eight holes, coming to the long, dog-leg ninth all even. Willett spurted at this point for two consecutive birdies and a 2-up lead, but Hammond again evened the match at the fourteenth when Willett caught the deep rough and couldn't get out.

Par Fifteenth Was Climax

The long, par 5 fifteenth hole was the climax. Hammond put together a long drive and perfect brassie shot just short of the green while Willett hooked his drive, half-shanked a wood shot into the rough on the opposite side of the fairway and half-missed an iron shot, still in the rough. Here he poked an approach within 6 feet of the cup and dropped the putt while Hammond was short of the green on a simple chip, then chipped 8 feet past the cup and missed the putt for a big 6.

Willett won the par four sixteenth by dropping an 8-foot putt and protected his 2-up lead on the seventeenth when Hammond took three to get on the par three green, Willett conceding a halve in fours.

The tournament was a grand slam for Willett. In addition to winning the medal and title he captained Bethesda to the team title. Willett graduates this month and will enter the Army next month while Hammond, who moved here recently from Columbus, Ga., has another year at the Virginia school.

Hard Hitting Villar Meets Hart Tonight

CLAUDIO VILLAR, AL HART'S FOE TONIGHT

Wilson Also Battles Phillips in 10-Round Semifinal at Griffith Stadium

Claudio Villar, hard-hitting Spaniard who now resides in the District, and big Al Hart, 235-pound Army War College Negro soldier, square off tonight at Griffith Stadium in the feature 10-rounder of Promoter Joe Turner's card.

Supplementing the affair is a 10-round bout in which Jackie Wilson, Pittsburgh Negro, former feather-weight champion, who disposed of Danny Petro here several weeks ago on a t. k. o. in 10 heats, will take on Jimmy "The Spoiler" Phillips of Cumberland. The winner of this fight will be offered a shot at Lew Hanbury, recent conqueror of N. B. A. Feather Champ Jackie Callura, whom Joe Turner offered $2000 only the other day to meet Wilson.

Villar, a hard-puncher who had Bob Pastor and Lee Savold on the floor in his other two bouts here is the ripping and tearing type of fighter who takes two punches to land one. His left hook to the body is particularly punishing and dangerous.

Hart, a strapping, splendidly built soldier who has won 19 of his last 21 fights here, is an ideal match for Villar. He is one of the best counterpunchers around these diggings and goes well against a fighter who keeps coming at him, which Villar does.

Villar's prospects for the future appear to be definitely on the upswing. From New York, Pete Reilly, the "Silver Fox of Fistiana," has come to second him and watch Villar with plans for bigger bouts in Manhattan this summer if the Spaniard shows he has successfully overcome his illness of recent weeks which has caused him to drop from 220 to 180. Now, Villar is tipping the scales at 198 and appears to be fully recovered from his sickness, brought about by spending 18 months in a Nazi concentration camp after the fall of France.

Billy Bates, Wilson's stablemate, will box Paulie Jackson, Uniontown, Pa., in an eight-round semi-windup.

Haegg Loses Plane 'Race' To Greg Rice

By the Associated Press

New York, June 6.—Gunder Haegg, the swift Swede, arrived in New York today with a toothy grin, an Alaskan gold nugget as a good-luck charm and a violinist's haircut, only to lose a pair of dashes to Greg Rice, the United States exponent of middle distance running.

Haegg, who owns seven world records from 1500 to 5000 meters, appeared drawn as he stepped down from the airplane although he said he was 9 pounds over his top running weight following the four-week ocean trip on a tanker which ended at New Orleans late yesterday.

He was met at the airport by Rice and members of the Swedish consulate. The two athletes took a couple of turns about the plane for the benefit of photographers with Rice winning both.

In answer to the inevitable question concerning the four-minute mile, Haegg replied that he thought the venture possible, but that he felt he did not have the equipment for the task. He lowered the record to 4:04.6 a little less than a year ago.

"All my records will be broken some time, but I am certain that I will not improve them. I am past my peak—after all, I am 24, and at that age a man becomes a sports writer, not a sports competitor," he added with a Swedish wink.

Nats Defeat Tigers Twice; Hold Second

across with a pass to Johnson after deliberately passing Spence.

That was the score at the end of the second inning, 5-1, and that was the score at the end of the game.

Candini was no tremendous success either, at the outset of his stint. The Tigers got a two-run lead against him in the fifth inning with the help of Sullivan's fumble, Wakefield's single to right, and a pair of wilting singles to center by Harris and York.

The Nats tied the score against Frank Overmire by easy stages. They picked up a run in the first on a walk to Spence, a wild pitch and the first of Johnson's four hits, a single to left. They got another in the second after Sullivan walked. Vernon doubled him home with a blow to left.

York Doubles

Back into a 3-2 lead went the Tigers in the fourth after York led off with a double to center and was wild pitched to third. Hoover's single scored him.

In the sixth though, the Nats blew Overmire out of the ball game with four big runs. Johnson beat out a hit to Hoover, Kampouris doubled to right, Sullivan walked to fill the bases, Marion batted for Giuliani but popped out on the first pitch. Vernon, however, got two runs home with a single to right. Pinch-hitter Gene Moore struck out, but Case singled home the third run of the inning, and Vernon scored from third with the fourth run as Parsons threw wild trying to nip Case's steal of second.

Rudy York pounded a homer into the left-field stands against Mertz with none on in the eighth, but the Nats knocked in the head all notions of a decisive Tiger rally by touching up Virgil Trucks for two runs in the eighth.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The second week of racing for the national war fund will be staged starting today. Due to the closing of the parking lot, lack of train service and the pleasure driving ban, Charles Town will not be able to match its contribution of last year when this track raised $94,000 for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities with its victory meeting. In fact, Charles Town has been staggering along. Attendance is off 31 per cent and betting is 57 per cent under last year. Purses are reduced but horsemen and townspeople who depend on racing for a livelihood are getting along. Jockey Stanley Austin, who has been riding in excellent form here, made a hurried trip to Boston over the weekend to take his first glimpse at his three-week-old son. There is one Kirk who hardly will grow up to a jockey. He is little Jimmy, baby son of Carson Kirk. Jimmy looks like the 1963 heavyweight wrestling champion. Leon Henderson, former price administrator and a party of friends were guests of R. J. Funkhouser, owner of the famous nearby Claymont estate and the O'Sullivan Farms Stable, at the weekend racing. Sorry to say there will not be a renewal of the Roman Boy-Try Flying sprint feud here this summer. Mrs. Arthur Bevans has shipped her horses, including Try Flying, to Canada. Mrs. N. K. Beal has sold the mare, Hardy Bud, to F. C. Wagoner of Texas. Electric and Miss Addie, owned by R. J. Costello of Washington, have been turned over to A. Jackson for training. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—BUGLER has had many a chance and if he fails in this I recommend that he be sent to the glue factory. HASTY ACTION turned in a fair race last out and is dangerous. CHAT HOPKINS for the minor money.

Second race—TRIPLE SUN had a world of trouble in that last and will be the winner with a share of racing luck. MISTAKE was taken up leaving the gate last out and is a threat. BIG SNEEZE will like this route.

Third race—ULTIMA THULE was in everbody's pocket but mine last out and looks good with these. FLAG ETTA and CLAY HILL for the place and show.

Fourth race—DIVIDEND looks like a solid proposition in this field. JULETTE has speed and is a threat. CLEANING TIME goes in new colors.

Fifth race—JOHN'S BUDDY has speed and may be the right one in this abbreviated sprint. STADIUM is better suited at a longer route, but should be along in time to be a threat. NOON STOP for the minor money.

Sixth race—ZELLEEN ZEE gets a good post position, has plenty of speed and looks solid. COPPERETTE is a fair sort and belongs close. HARD LOSER for the show.

Seventh race—PHANTOM PLAYER and JACK HORNER are a tight fit in this and I prefer them in the order named. LADY LONGWORTH is much improved.

Best bet—ZELLEEN ZEE.

IT is unnatural for people with sons and brothers at the front to strike.

It's easy to hurl dirty words at them when they do halt war work, but maybe we'll get further if we dig down below the accusations and find out what really is the matter.

Generally strikes result from mis-managed human nature. Sometimes Labor Leaders do the mis-managing, sometimes Management itself is to blame.

But, in wartime, both Management and Labor Leaders are having the grim experience of watching Government try its hand at managing human nature . . . So far, Government isn't doing so good.

▶ There are many causes of strikes, but we believe the way to stop strikes that are aimed at breaking through wage ceilings is to encourage every man to feel that he is "in business for himself."

The best way to make a man feel that way is to see that he gets an automatic reward for every improvement in his work.

Today, fair and workable plans for tying wages to performance instead of artificial ceilings have been developed. They are being used successfully in many industries.

Such plans should be pushed more vigorously by Government and Labor, as well as Management.

Most of this trouble traces back to the fact that Government wants more and more production on one hand, while on the other it discourages the individual enterprise that creates production

Much of the public resistance to sound and necessary Government acts stems from fear that regimentation and bureaucratic control of our lives is the real goal of Government.

▶ The real objective of Government should be to release the immense powers of individual effort.

After all, Government's need is simple. It wants MORE WORK DONE IN LESS TIME.

Getting more work done in less time is Industry's dish.

Doesn't it make sense, therefore, for Government to devote every effort to making it easy for Industry to do its job?

If government people want to know how industry has gotten more work done in less time, the answer is easy. Here it is:

1. Constantly improve the equipment available for workers.
2. Use the lowered costs thus produced to
   (a) lower prices to consumers.
   (b) raise wages in proportion to increased efficiency.
   (c) provide incentives for invention, investment and individual enterprise.
   (d) lay aside "Seed Money" that can be used to start over again at item 1.

Constantly Improved Equipment

▶ Few people ever think of "constantly improved equipment" as a helpful answer to war production, manpower shortages, raw materials shortages, food shortages and post-war jobs.

Yet constant improvement in machines and methods is our only chance for doing more work in less time.

Lower Costs Produce Lower Prices:

▶ In these days of price ceilings, we think so much of higher prices that we forget how easy it will be to lower prices when we can get better machines.

Wages in Ratio to Efficiency

With all the talk of wage freezing, we also forget that the true American system is to raise wages without increasing prices, through better machines and methods. Strikes for higher wages disappear when incentive wages are properly used.

Incentives for Invention, Investment and Development

▶ Of all the things that helped make America great, this is the one that has taken the most kicking around.

Excessive taxes on business profits, salary freezing and hundreds of other political limitations discourage the old "take a chance" spirit that built up our country.

Lower Costs Provide "Seed Money"

Another thing you hear a lot of talk about in Washington is "Post-War Planning."

In Washington, that means public works and government spending.

In Industry, it means developing and buying new machines to produce new products to sell at lower prices to attract enough new buyers to make 20,000,000 new jobs.

The Washington plan means more taxes.

The Industrial way will pay for itself.

But Industry will need billions of dollars to convert its machines and factories back to peace work. That will cost as much as war conversion, or more.

That's why Industry needs to save its "Seed Money" now.

The only way industry can get more "Seed Money" is through a complete change of government attitudes toward industry. We hope government people will soon see that when tax laws decrease the saving of "Seed Money" (money earmarked for plowing back into a business) they strike at industry's only means of developing this country after the war.

What You Can Do About It

▶ If you agree with this advertisement, then write to your congressman and tell him you believe in the Incentive System that has built up our country—that means Incentives for labor, as well as for invention, investment and management. Ask him to review each proposed law and regulation with this fact in mind:

"Industrial Progress is the Source of all Good Living."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

WMC Contemplates More Women Workers

A new move to force the hiring of greater numbers of women in the Federal service is in the making. War Manpower Commission officials have under consideration a proposal which would require agencies to prove that men were needed for certain jobs. Civil Service Commission would be called on to enforce the proposed WMC regulation. Agencies now have the privilege of requesting men and women for certain types of Federal jobs. Some agencies are accused of maintaining their peacetime habits by demanding men for jobs that women could easily fill. Under the proposed regulations, these agencies would have to produce "convincing proof" that the men were absolutely necessary. The result would be the hiring of more women and fewer men, particularly in the draft age.

At Justice a story is being told about a Federal official whose young son half awoke him in the dead of night crying for a drink of water. The official rolled over and replied:

"Fill out a requisition in triplicate on Standard Form No. A-588-B-21 and the matter will receive attention in due course."

Maurice Collins, executive assistant to Federal Security Boss Paul McNutt, is reported ready to resign to become financial officer of Veterans Administration. One of the ablest and most likable men in Government, Collins sought to resign some time ago, but heads of various FSA agencies persuaded him to remain. Leo Miller, FSA budget officer, probably will replace Collins, but he'll be missed by McNutt and the entire FSA organization . . . The Senate Truman and Kilgore committees appear all set to demand that Jimmy Byrnes give both farmers and labor representation on his Office of War Mobilization . . . From now on the Government cafeterias will limit you to: one meat dish; two pieces of hot bread, one dessert, and one pat of butter.

We'll have another lesson in bureaucratese today. Bureaucratese, you know, is the language of the red tapists. Through this column Federal employes have been compiling a dictionary of overused words and phrases in Government. The employes have their own definitions and here are some of them:

"The statistical approach"—A confession that the correct data is too hard to get, so here's our best guess.

"Just returned to the office"—He has been here all the time, but he just remembered to do the work when you appeared.

"Rush job"—You do something about this quickly. I haven't done a thing about it in three months and the boss is mad.

"Confidential work"—We're so ashamed of what we're doing that we don't want anyone to know about it.

"Expedite"—Stop everything. Put my case through at once. To hell with the others.

"The public"—Those who aren't in on the cut.

"For your approval"—You sign this, too, so if the boss kicks you can share the blame.

"Washington thinking on this"—According to what official is doing the thinking.

Charles F. Palmer, one of the many former Federal housing officials, is reported to be doing work on postwar projects for the White House. . . . It is Representative Andresen, Minnesota Republican, who wants to investigate Ben Cohen, the brain-truster. . . . Representative Mary Norton of New Jersey, is chairman of the House Labor Committee, but she was refused time to speak on the Connally-Smith bill when it was being debated in the House. And was she mad! . . . That barber shop in Pentagon is still closed to civilians, though the officers don't always keep it busy. . . . Oh, yes; an Army officer admittted to me, very much off the record, of course, that a gymnasium is being constructed in the Pentagon. The gym and recreation center was revealed here, but the official word from the Army was "We know nothing about it." I believe the recreation center is a good idea, but I can't understand why it's surrounded with mystery.

Federal agencies will have until Wednesday to make their nominations for the May Better Government Contest. The Post will award a $100 war bond to the employe who made the most constructive suggestion for the improvement of the Federal service during May. The winner will be announced Sunday. Another $100 bond will be awarded for this month. Federal workers in Washington and vicinity are eligible to compete . . . LETTER: "As an incentive to punctuality among Government workers, I suggest crediting one hour of 'victory leave' for each week of 100 per cent attendance. Said victory leave to be in addition to all regularly accrued leave but to be allowed only after the war is won, when the worker can more easily be spared from his or her job." This very good suggestion came from Harry Traub, War Department employe.

Signed and Delivered to Aberdeen

Hartford, Conn., Pvt. Sam Buchieri wrote to his parents from the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Ground that a captured Italian truck had been brought there with the names of several American soldiers written on it.

Among the autographs he found that of his brother, Corpl. Pat Buchieri, who is serving in Africa.

Privates Take Orders

"War is a question of kill or be killed," thundered Maj. Gen. Davenport Johnson to gunnery students at Wendover Field, Utah.

"Those words should be written in 18-foot letters on the mountainside," agreed another officer.

A literal-minded private construed it as a military order and installed the motto according to specifications.

Wide Vision Needed, G. W. Class Told

Several Colleges Hold Graduations; Other Exercises Are Scheduled Today

Graduates of the Georgetown University School of Law were told yesterday afternoon at commencement exercises in Gaston Hall that the world revolution of ideas through which we are passing requires lawyers of international vision.

The Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent, addressed the class of 27 candidates for degrees which were conferred by the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J. Dr. Robert Adam Maurer, a member of the law faculty for 30 years and vice president of the District Board of Education, was the recipient of an honorary doctor of laws degree.

Dr. Hugh J. Fegan, assistant dean, presented a number of honor students for special academic awards and also presented five candidates for degrees from the graduate school and 22 from the undergraduate school.

Awards Presented.

Civilian War Service Seeks $5000 Head

The man who will be chosen director of Washington's Civilian War Service, must be a successful business man who will accept the $5000 a year job, perhaps at a financial loss, according to Harry Wender, who is drafting the plans for the new setup. Wender declared the plans have appr val of all the recognizzed civilian war agencies.

While the service will not be under the regular Department of Civilian Defense, it will be recognized as an official District agency, operating under the Commissioners through a volunteer service board.

The executive committee of the Civilian War Services had asked for $70,000 and status as a division of the Civilian Defense Department. They were granted only $25,000.

The principal outlay, Wender said, will be for the salaries of a director, an administrative assistant at $2100, a secretary at $2000, a stenographer at $1800, and an area and block organization entailing a $2600 executive assistant, a secretary and assistant.

The rest of the money will be used to pay the salaries of stenographers who will compile information to help coordinate efforts of the volunteers. Supplies and equipment will account for the balance of $4900.

John D. Babbage, speaking for the District Defense Council, a group of citizens, said: "This new outfit is another group superimposed upon many other groups for the express purpose of spending $25,000 and would perform no useful service that is not now adequately performed by the many social and governmental agencies throughout the District."

"Congressional" Derailed in Penn.

Two cars of the advanced section of the Pennsylvania Railroad's 13-car "Congressional" Limited en route to New York from Washington were derailed at Philadelphia yesterday at 5:57 p. m., a spokesman for the railroad announced.

No one was injured and the train continued in to New York after the derailed eighth and ninth following cars were cut off at Philadelphia. Defective journal boxes were blamed for the derailment. Passengers were transferred to other trains for New York. The train left Washington at 4 p. m. and was due in New York at 7:30 p. m.

Group Asks End Of Discrimination

Seven hundred Negroes meeting last night under auspices of the National Negro Council and United Government Employes adopted a resolution asking President Roosevelt to order an end to "the present discrimination of the Federal Housing Agency which is denying homes to Negro warworkers."

Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council and president of United Government Employes, presided at the meeting at Shiloh Baptist Church, Ninth and P Streets Northwest.

Washington Choral Society Exemplifies Ideals of Director

By Ray C. B. Brown

Calvary Methodist Church presents the Washington Choral Society on Sunday night in a performance of Bach's Motet, "Jesus, Priceless Treasure." Conductor: Louis A. Potter. Solo Trio: Shannon Bolin, George Irving Chandler and John Yard.

Closing its activities for the season, the Washington Choral Society exemplified again last evening the idealistic aims of its director, Louis A. Potter, by singing Bach's beautiful motet, "Jesus, Priceless Treasure." The use of an English text enhanced one's enjoyment of the work which is based on Johann Franck's hymn, "Jesu, meine Freude," one of the most striking of the old German chorales with a memory-haunting tune by Johann Crueger. The performance by the chorus was effective and moving, and the mood of the listener was not disturbed by applause, as this was precluded by the presentation as an evensong service.

BROWN

In contrast to the large number of cantatas, only six motets by Bach survive, and a seventh, "Ich lasse dich nicht," is generally considered to be by another hand. "Jesus, Priceless Treasure," was composed in 1723, the first year of Bach's cantorship in Leipzig. It is marked throughout by his remarkable skill in using familiar chorale tunes as a basis for musical structures of impressive character. The Crueger theme opens and closes the motet, and appears here and there either in straight form or in variations, binding the 11 parts of the work into an integral whole.

Bch's dramatic instinct always employed with the sincerest religious motive and not as a theatrical device, gives power particularly to two of the choruses. In "There is nought of condemnation," the pause after "nought" and the repitition of the word as the phrase is completed has an arresting effect upon the attention; and nothing more convincing and challenging was ever written by Bach than the chorus, "Death, I do not fear thee."

Jewish Community Center presents the annual concert of the Jewish Folk Chorus on Sunday night in Cafritz Auditorium. Conductor: Mendy Shain. Guest soloist: Abrasha Robofski. Program of folk songs followed by Max Helfman's adaptation of Handel's oratorio, "Judas Maccabeus."

Cafritz Auditorium held a large audience last evening for the annual concert of the Jewish Folk Chorus, the organization of amateur singers trained by Mendy Shain into an ensemble of the most enthusiastic kind. With the exception of the director's wife, Malke Shain, whose soprano voice has the timbre and grace of cultivated artistry, the chorus is composed of housewives, clerks and businessmen who sing for the joy of making music together. What musicianship they possess is innate or derived from the indefatigable zest of their conductor.

The first part of the program was devoted to folk songs arranged by Max Helfman or composed by Chulaki Schaefer and Alessandrov. Not included in that category was Dmitri Shostakovich's simple and stirring "Song of the United Nations," which deserves more popular use than it has yet received in this country. Most interesting of the folk songs were Schaefer's "Our Leader," Helfman's arrangement of "Dzhanskoye" and Alessandrov's "Song About Voroshilov."

Brought up to date with a Yiddish text which applies to the present resistance to the attempted tyranny of Hitler was Max Helfman's condensation and adaptation of Handel's oratorio, "Judas Maccabeus," which proved to be well worth hearing. Abrasha Robofski lent his robust and stimulating voice as the baitone soloist, and Mrs. Shain was the effective soprano soloist. Only seven of the choruses from the oratorio were used, and they are so well chosen and arranged as to be admirably coherent.

Phillips Memorial Gallery presents Shannon Bolin in a song recital on Sunday afternoon. Accompanist: Willa Semple. Program of songs by Gluck, Scarlatti, Donaudy, Paisiello, Schubert, Brahms, Griffes, Charwick, Vaughan-Williams, Mednikov and Grieg.

Shannon Bolin, whose contralto voice has a warm and sympathetic vibrance, gave a pleasing recital yesterday afternoon with Willa Semple as her capable accompanist. There were no novelties on the program, but Miss Shannon's artistic treatment of her chosen material made one attentive and rewarded. She began with Gluck's ever-lovely aria, "Che faro senza Euridice," following it with operatic arias by Scarlatti and Paisiello, and by one of Stefano Donaudy's 12 "Airs in Ancient Style."

In her second group were three lieder by Schubert—"Du bist die Ruh," "Die junge Nonne" and "Rastlose Liebe"—and Brahms' "Der Schmied." In her final group were three songs by American composers—Charles Griffes' atmospheric "By a Lonely Forest Pathway" and George Chadwick's "The Danza" and "Allah"—conjoined with Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Silent Noon," Mednivok's "The Hills of Gruzia" and Grieg's "A Dream."

Eisenhower Honored as D. C. Father Nominations Continue

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in North Africa, yesterday was named the "outstanding father of 1943" by the National Father's Day Committee in New York, while locally nominations for Washington's "ideal father" continued to swamp The Post's Father's Day Editor.

General Eisenhower, whose son John is a cadet at West Point, was informed of the designation in a cablegram which lauded him for "sterling qualities of leadership and inspiration to the youth of today and all future generations."

Meanwhile, Washington residents sent in an impressive stack of letters describing their "top pop" in The Post's quest, which closes June 15 in anticipation of the celebration of Father's Day, June 20.

Letters describing the typical Dad—whether he is your own, a relative or just a friend—should be addressed to Father's Day Editor, The Washington Post, and should be mailed as soon as possible so that excerpts may be chosen for daily publication. Don't forget—June 15 is the deadline.

Man Fatally Hurt as Auto Strikes Tree

J. M. Cunningham, Engraving Executive, Apparently Lost Control of Car

Joseph Maxson Cunningham, 48, president of the Lanman Engraving Co. of Washington, was injured fatally early yesterday when the car he was driving crashed into a tree on Connecticut Avenue near Rosemary Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Cunningham was pronounced dead at Georgetown Hospital, where he was taken by the Bethesda Rescue Squad. Police said he apparently had lost control of his car.

Cunningham, who lived at 208 East Thornapple Street, Chevy Chase, Md., was a vice president of the International Photo Engravers Association and president of the Washington Photo Engraving Association. He was a member of the Congress Masonic lodge, the Washington Board of Trade, the Touchdown Club and the Gridiron Club.

Gridiron Club Secretary

A native Washingtonian, he moved to Chevy Chase 19 years ago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham. His father, an executive with the Acacia Life Insurance Co., at one time was a cartoonist and writer for Washington newspapers. He has been secretary of the Gridiron Club for a number of years.

In addition to his parents, he leaves his wife, Mrs. Gwendolyn Cunningham; two sons, Lieut. (j. g.) Joseph M. Cunningham, jr., of the Coast Guard, stationed in New York, and Halter Cunningham of the Marine Corps, who was wounded at Guadalcanal and now is in a hospital at San Diego, Calif.; a brother, Col. Harry Francis Cunningham, U. S. A., of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. E. B. Hartshorn, of Hanover, N. H.

The body is at the Hines funeral home. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Trailer Truck Overturns

A 10-ton trailer truck carrying a huge piece of machinery from the Philadelphia Navy Yard to a naval base in the South overturned at Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast yesterday when the load shifted.

Frank A. Chibsey of Atlantic City, driver of the heavy van, was uninjured. He told police an 8000-pound machine, the trucks' load, broke its bounds when he turned a corner. The shift turned the truck over on its side.

The driver said the type of machine and its destination were naval secrets.

Blind Man's Safe And $169 Stolen; Guard Accused

A 23-year-old Federal building guard stationed at the Weather Bureau was at liberty under $1000 bail last night, charged with the theft of a safe containing $169 from a blind man's concession at the bureau.

The suspect, James Grubb, of 4200 Lawrence Street, Colmar Manor, Md., was seized at his home Saturday night by Detective Sergts. Irving Lubore and Robert J. Maghan. He admitted the crime, they said.

Officials at the bureau reported the safe, weighing about 25 pounds, had been taken from the building Friday night, despite the protection of a burglar alarm attachment.

Grubb, the detectives stated, admitted he carried the safe to his automobile parked near the Weather Bureau, Twenty-fourth and M Streets Northwest, and left it there until quitting time. He pried open the door and then hid the money in a can in his cellar, Maghan and Lubore revealed.

He surrendered the money to them and then showed the detectives where he had thrown the safe into a creek at Brentwood, Md. It, too, was recovered.

Mrs. Ann Bradley Dies at 62; Rites Set for Tomorrow

Mrs. Ann Phelps Bradley, 62, wife of Charles Hamilton Bradley, Washington attorney, died yesterday at her home, 1808 Hoban Road Northwest.

A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sevellon A. Brown, Mrs. Bradley was born and reared in Washington. She was a granddaughter of the late Seth L. Phelps, a member of the first Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Her father-in-law was the late Justice Andrew C. Bradley of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Mrs. Bradley was an active worker with the American Red Cross and was formerly a member of the board of directors of Columbia Hospital.

Survivors in addition to her husband include her son, Charles H. Bradley, jr., of Fairfax County, Va.; three daughters, Mrs. William Griffith of Front Royal, Va.; Miss Barbara Bradley and Miss Sally Bradley; a sister, Mrs. Gertrude B. Huntress, and two brothers, Sevellon Brown of Providence, R. I., and Ledyard M. Brown.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 p. m. tomorrow at Oak Hill Chapel by the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church of which Mrs. Bradley was a member. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Victory Sidelights

Washington Still Exceeds In War Bonds

Washington still buys more War Bonds per capita than any other city in the United States, according to a statement made yesterday by H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the District of Columbia War Savings Committee.

A total per capita average of nearly $25 a month was invested in series E bonds during April and May, he added.

Sales of $10,870,425 of bonds during May topped all previous records and amounted to 145 per cent of the quota of $7,500,000 set by the Treasury. The District has exceeded its quota materially each month since series E quotas were inaugurated last December, it was reported.

Aided by the Second War Loan Campaign during the latter part of April and in early May, total sales of E bonds for those months reached the record sum of $20,163,016.

Talk on Time Bombs

Lieut. Comd. Francis McNab, of the Royal Navy, attached to the British Admiralty Commission here, will recount his experiences in deactivating the time bombs dropped on London during the blitz of 1940 to the House Office Building air-raid wardens tomorrow, at 2 p. m.

Commander McNab was one of 12 who volunteered for bomb disposal work and, after five hours of instruction, tackled his first time bomb. Only three of the 12 survived the assignment.

Meeting Date Changed

Meeting of the Men's Surgical Dressing Unit of the District Red Cross has been changed to Monday evenings, 6:30 to 9:30 p. m. at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue. Additional volunteers are invited to join the group.

Blood Donor Displays

Druggists in the District will exhibit counter and window displays this week to aid the Red Cross blood donor recruiting program, according to a plan announced by J. C. Folger, chairman of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Party for Patients

An evening of entertainment and refreshments, highlighted by an old-time minstrel show, will be staged respectively for patients of Mount Alto and Walter Reed Hospitals by members of the Kilowatt and Pepcolite employes clubs of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co. tonight and Thursday. Participating in the production will be the American Legion Honor Guard and members of PEPCO Post, No. 43.

Contest Closes Friday

A poster contest, open to students of the Washington junior and senior high schools, and intended to cultivate interest in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, will close Friday, it was announced yesterday by the WAAC recruiting office of the military district of Washington, which is cosponsoring the competition with the District Rotary Club.

All posters submitted will be on display in the WAAC recruiting office, United States Information Building, 1400 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, June 14 through 16. Prizes will be presented by the Rotary Club at their regular luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel Wednesday, June 16, and will be in the form of $75, $50 and $25 War Bonds.

Prizes Awarded

The District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association presented prizes yesterday to the winners of the annual essay contest at a meeting at the Elks Home, 301 Rhode Island Avenue. The winners were Marguerite Russel, Howard University; James L. White, Armstrong High, and Melvyn Harrison, Randall Junior High.

Older Girls Said to Lack Recreation

Social Workers Assert Capital's Program Neglects Important Group

Washington's recreational program is neglecting women over 30, John C. Junek, director of education and recreation at the residence for government girls, Arlington Farms, Va., declared yesterday. He expressed alarm at the social maladjustment of the older, less adaptable women working in wartime Washington, saying they constitute a greater problem than teen-age girls away from home for the first time.

"In technical terms of our new government dormitories, any woman over 23 years is in the older group because 50 per cent of the girls are under that age," Junek explained.

Mrs. Lillian Hurlbut of the War Hospitality Committee said one of the recreational difficulties for older girls arises from the fact that hostess groups exclude them from dances for service men.

The problem of older girls has just been taken under consideration by a committee of recreation leaders here. Entertainment by church groups, classes in vocational and personal improvement, circulating libraries in war workers' dormitories are some ideas which have been suggested.

Ray L. Huff, director of the District Board of Public Welfare, said he had no information indicating that older women are a special social problem. He said all age of women need recreation, and recommended that they make friends with fellow workers, and visit them in their homes.

"Women here from out of town miss home life more than anything else," Huff declared. "Dances are all right. But it is more important to find congenial friends who become homes in Washington."

Funeral Services For Mrs. Sinnott To Be Tomorrow

Mrs. Alyce Weaver Sinnott, the wife of the late Joseph J. Sinnott, former doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, died at the Washington Seminary Saturday after a two months' illness. She came to Washington 35 years ago from her birthplace, West Moreland County, Va. She was a member of the E Pluribus Unum Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Sinnott is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Virginia W. Sherman; a brother, Archie L. Weaver, and three sisters, Mrs. Henrietta Lundy, Miss Marguerite Weaver and Miss Margory Weaver, all residents of Washington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Hines funeral home. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will officiate. Interment will be private.

Clarence Butt Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Clarence T. Butt, 51, who died at his home near Hunting Hill Saturday after a long illness, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Pumphrey funeral home, Rockville. The Rev. William B. Waters, pastor of Faith Methodist Chapel, Derwood, Md., will conduct the services and burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Mr. Butt, farmer and life-long resident of the Hunting Hill neighborhood is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie Mae Butt, and seven children, Mrs. Frederick Burriss, Sykesville, Md., Mrs. Earl Bolton, Hunting Hill, Md.; Charles Upton Butt, Potomac, Md., Minnie Mae Butt, Clarence Butt, Lewis T. Butt and Sidney Eugene Butt, all of Hunting Hill.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Disillusioned With Marriage Made Four Months Ago to Home-Town Boy Now in the Army, Girl Is Cracking Under Strain of Homesick Introspection

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is my story. I am a war bride, married four months. My husband is a home town boy. He seemed nice enough, honest and clean-cut. He was drafted and sent here to Washington. Later, due to his urging, we were married "back home" during his furlough, and then I came here to live and work. Now I am wondering,—does a girl have any hope of making a good life for herself, when she is so weak that she lets herself be talked into marriage when only half-willing?

Is a person really strong or weak, adventurous or just dumb, when she leaves her family (the dearest people on earth to her) to get married, and finds she has made a mistake, and continues to try to give the impression that she is madly in love with her husband? And is it a wife's duty to give in to her husband's selfish desires every time he gets home from camp,—against her natural inclination? When one has made such a mistake as I have made, is one crazy to be so afraid of life that they can admit to no one (but you and themselves) that they HAVE made a mistake?

Is this life,—to be young, to have made a mistake that seems to offer no "out," and to be spending one's days working to the point of exhaustion, to keep from thinking of the happy past, the hopeless present and the dreary future? Is it fair to be young and have to sit alone on Sunday nights, nearly 1000 miles away from home, tearful and blue,—trying to push back memories of other Sunday nights that were always joyful? Must one suffer forever because one was reared too "gently,"—given everything by a too generous dad, and never taught anything about life by an invalid mother? For weeks I have had the dazed feeling that this was just a bad dream that would pass; but I am afraid it is real.

Friends, even girl friends, cause quarrels between my husband and me. He feels I should be able to entertain myself during the time he can't be home; and should be happy just thinking of how grand it will be when he gets home. Also, money is a constant worry. As fast as I save, he spends. Financially he is a handicap to me, and doesn't even show any appreciation of my efforts. His company is only welcome as such; and I ask myself if I should go on pretending a wifely feeling for him that I do not have, when our relationship seems so worthless in every way?

No doubt you will think me inhumanly selfish; but believe me, I was never this way before. I believe I have changed for the worse because of a life lived so very much alone. Tell me, do you see any solution? Divorce is the worst thing I can imagine;—it would be a great humiliation to my old-fashioned and very dear family. If we had married in peacetime conditions and had lived back home, do you think the marriage would have worked out better? If you think so, I would try to stick it out a little longer. Otherwise, what about a separation and my going back home? HEARTSICK BRIDE.

Not a Simple Problem Of Mistaken Marriage

DEAR H. B.: It is very plain that your marriage is a woeful mistake, and a seriously demoralizing experience for you. The only sensible and courageous thing to do is to call it off,—since your mounting morbid aversion to your husband can only make any further intimacy with him a mutually degrading exchange, which should be ruled out as quickly as possible, for the good of both. It is equally plain that you got married in vast ignorance of the so-called "facts of life,"—with only some dim instinct to warn you that this man was not the right man for you.

You got married mostly for adventure reasons,—for the supposed thrill of being a "war bride," and "going to live in Washington,"—without giving much, if any, thought to the realistic demands and responsibilities of the close personal relationship that was being contracted; and somewhat in defiance of a nagging awareness that the "nice enough" boy really didn't mean very much to you. However, the desperate distress of mind that has overtaken you since becoming a bride is not entirely due to a wrong choice of husband. Your total disillusionment with your husband might have been met in better spirit, and an emergency solution of the problem forthrightly undertaken, if you had possessed a more mature temperament.

She Should Go Home To Avoid Breakdown

The shattering magnitude of your despondency reflects a disturbing degree of psychological immaturity,—which gives rise to an almost frantic desolation and remorse as the thought of having traded your birthright relationship of cherished "little girl" for the comfortless berth of dissatisfied wife. Your "sunk" reaction to the unhappy present indicates that you were not at all prepared psychologically to leave the home nest and breast the hazards of adult experience on your own power. You are oppressed by a feeling of being lost, as it were, between two worlds,—the familiar small world of carefree young girlhood, toward which you look back so nostalgically, and that larger world of grown-up, exciting importance and satisfactions which you had supposed lay just beyond the threshold of matrimony. It is as if you had said goodby to the one world, without first getting hold of the right key to the other world,—so that now you find yourself out in the cold and the dark, somewhere in-between.

Since you are so poorly prepared, psychologically, to stand on your own feet and independently work out the solution of your problem, I believe you should give up the ghost of the marriage and go back home,—primarily as a matter of health protection. I think it is entirely possible that you might collapse into a "nervous breakdown," in the not too distant future, if you continue to drift along here, in your present cloudy, wretched and morbidly homesick state of mind. And with this type of illness, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. You can nip it in the bud and disperse nervous depression by acting quickly to relieve intolerable pressure before the "crack-up" comes. But it is a much more difficult and lengthy business to nurse the nervous patient back to health, when once his control has snapped.

Must Learn to Think And Act Maturely

When you have the reassuring ground of home under your feet, once more, you should take advantage of the mental peace and calm it gives you, to intelligently apply yourself to the educational task of learning how to think and behave maturely. If there is a good psychologist in that locality,—or within a radius of 50 miles,—you should discuss your marriage fizzle and past social history with him,—by way of putting the finger on aspects of retarded development in your personality and getting his advice on how to "grow up" in those backward areas of self. If there is no such consultant in that community, or that part of the country, you might talk with Dr. J. Lowery Fendrich, dean of the Institute of Applied Religion and Psychology, telephone FRanklin 3763, in this city, before going back home. Dr. Fendrich's work in personality reconstruction is so conducted that students may derive considerable benefit by mail communication; as well as by individually pursuing reading courses which the Institute provides or recommends.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Physician Debunks Huxley Book of Eye Exercises

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

"THE ART of Seeing" is the title of a book by Mr. Aldous Huxley, published a few months ago. I have enjoyed Mr. Huxley's other books and thought this might be a characteristically sensitive account of how he learned to find hidden meanings and angles in the common sights of the world around us.

What I actually found was a shock and a disillusionment. Mr. Huxley had the misfortune to suffer in his youth from a serious eye affection which forced him to leave Eton College and from which he was almost blind for three or four years. He made his way through Oxford by reading with a magnifying glass. He states that he had keratitis punctata, a set of spotted opacities on the cornea. This left him with one eye just capable of light perception and the other with 5 per cent of normal vision.

That he achieved such a degree of literary success as he did with such a handicap is, of course, remarkable and creditable to his will power and inner vision, for inner vision he has aplenty.

A few years ago he fell in with the teachings of William H. Bates, a self-appointed healer whose German followers have not hesitated to compare him with Christ; who claimed to cure glaucoma, near-sightedness, far-sightedness, astigmatism, old-age eyes, which require reading glasses; cough, hay fever, facial neuralgia, cataract, syphilis of the eye and central blindness.

Bates' method depends on exercises of two of the six muscles by which we can, by voluntary control, move the eyeballs to the right and left and up and down and obliquely. They are attached to the outside of the eyeball, not to the lens, which accommodates our vision to far objects or near objects. Nor do they change the shape of the cornea, which has to do with astigmatism; nor the length of the eyeball, which has to do with near and far sightedness. Besides these exercises, Bates had a number of other maneuvers.

Now, it is understandable how a man with Huxley's disabilities must have suffered great distress and repeated fatigue in the use of his eyes. Some of Bates' treatments would naturally help to rest such eyes; for instance, "palming," which consists simply in covering the eyes with the palms for a while, and "shifting," which is moving the focus from one thing to another. These are methods of mental, ocular and bodily relaxation.

But to suggest that they or any of the other exercises relieve poor vision and eyestrain due to poor curvature of the cornea and lens is not only absurd but wicked, because people who could be instantly relieved by glasses are gulled into undergoing a long set of exercise training which not only does not improve their vision, but gives them serious eyestrain.

That a man, the grandson of T. H. Huxley, one of the most scientific writers of the last generation, should sponsor such nonsense is indeed a discouraging sign for our civilization.

Keeping Basin Clean

One way to assure a neat wash bowl in the bathroo mis to hang a clean soft cloth near it. Instruct every member o fthe family to wipe the basin with this cloth every time the bowl is used. Face cloths that have worn thin, small napkins that are threadbare, and similar pieces of fabric make suitable wiping cloths. They can be laundered and rinsed in the bathroom many times.

WOMEN'S SHOES, SECOND FLOOR

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

We are apt to think of the black market as an established place—like the old speakeasy—where smuggled stock is sold illegally to a rather exclusive clientele. But it isn't a place as much as a transaction.

It could operate right in your own kitchen if rationed foods are delivered without coupons or more left than warranted by the stamps surrendered. It could be a rendezvous with an unmarked truck off the beaten track or a little understanding with the proprietor of a store where you have been trading for years.

One reason the black market exists, is there is a streak of human nature that seems to like outsmarting the law. But dealing with it is a stumbling block to the war effort.

Maybe you would no more deliberately take part in such a transaction than you would filch coins from the church collection box. But you might do it unthinkingly. For example, a taxi driver or a generous friend with extra gas might ask, "Could you use a little more gasoline?"

Could you!

If you live in the suburbs, you may be having a mighty hard time getting anywhere on that little dribble of gas allowed by the law and you may reason that you are only evening the score with the city folks with a bus or streetcar right at the door who are given the same number of ration points. But the big idea is to keep the bombers flying and that takes all the gas we can do without. Walking is an inconvenience, but it is no sacrifice. This is a word we want to save for the boys who are doing the fighting.

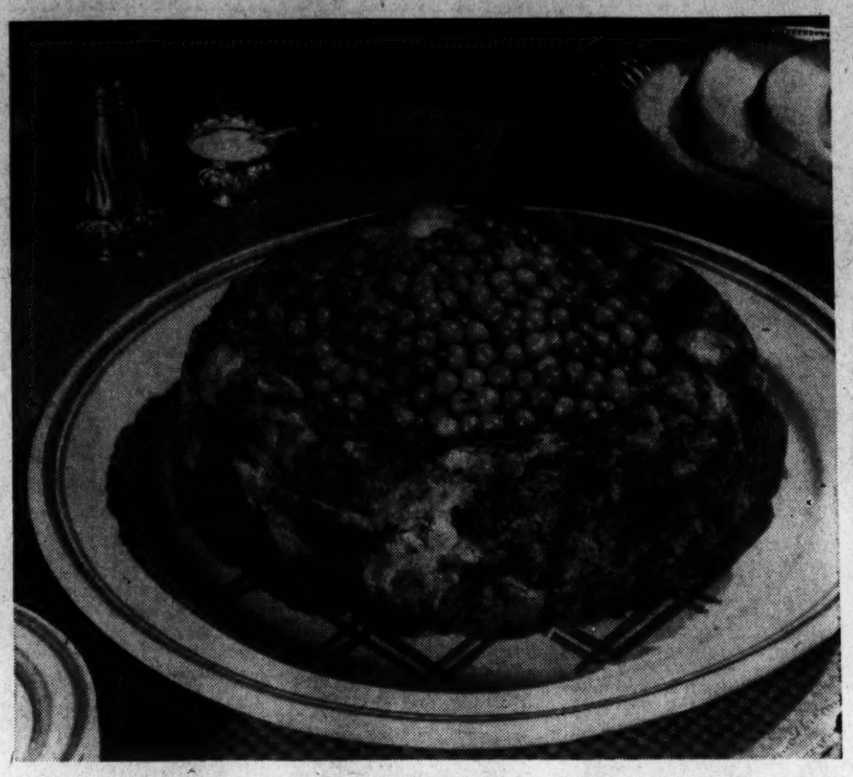
When you really need something, you are apt to minimize the way of getting it. If it's butter, all you can think of is how to get hold of some. Besides, you don't see how the little bit you take could make any difference. But when you buy bootleg butter, you are breaking the law that was set up to give us both guns and butter.

Of course, you are fully aware that you are dealing with the black market when you trade in places where ceiling prices are not posted or are posted where they will not be noticed, or where you can get rationed goods without a stamp. But look out. Mr Whiskers may catch you.

When it comes to rationing, it is no better to give than to receive Sure, now that you are walking you need shoes. But you may not need to use that Number 17 coupon. Would it occur to you to tear it up? No. Probably your first thought would be to give it to someone else who could use it. Anyone outside your own family who actually needs more than the ration allowance of shoes can get them. If you give your coupon away, you are a black market dealer. And to the degree that more than the absolutely necessary amount of civilian goods will have to be manufactured, the war effort is slowed up. The same goes for the coffee and meat stamps you do not use. If you pass them along, it means someone is getting more than the legal allotment. The more we can all get along without, the sooner the war will be over.

There is not a real American who would prolong the war for a single hour. Let's look at the black market as sabotage and stamp it out.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



A squash ring such as pictured above is a grand dish to make a little meat go a long way and also furnish dependable nutrition. The enriched white bread crumbs with the squash and the meat go to make up not only a nutritious dish but also one that is pretty as a picture. After baking the ring to a golden brown fill the center with buttered peas and you will have a meal-in-one dish

Martha Ellyn

"If the use of enriched flour and bread becomes universal, the average intake of Vitamin B1 in the American diet will be increased about 64 per cent." That is a statement made by Dr. R. R. Williams, chairman, committee on cereals, food, and nutrition board, National Research Council.

This is a fact that should be recognized by all homemakers. The war has brought home to us the realization that proper food has a tremendous effect upon our health, strength and morale.

Enriched white bread is a food upon which no restrictions have been placed. Like all bread, enriched white bread is not fattening when properly included in a well-constructed daily diet. Two one-ounce slices of this type of bread, eaten at each meal, will give at least 38 per cent of the minimum daily requirement for B1; 15 per cent of the daily need for niacin (another B vitamin) and 15 per cent of the daily iron requirement.

One excellent way of getting enriched white bread into the menu is to make it into a Squash Meat Ring. This will require two cups of this type of bread crumbs. Here is the recipe for preparing this nutritious ring:

With this main dish you need prepare but few other items to have a nutritious meal.

SQUASH MEAT RING

Mix together 2 cups soft, enriched white bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ pound each of ground pork and veal and 2½ cups cooked, mashed squash. Add 1 unbeaten egg, 2 teaspoons salt and ½ teaspoon pepper, and stir until well mixed. Pack into a ring mold and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 1 hour. Turn out of mold and fill center with buttered peas or any other fresh vegetable available. Serves six.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Notice: Will Mrs. Mason send me her full address? Leaflets were returned to you but not the letter which should have accompanied them. Please let me send this to you.

Mrs. E.: What do I consider to be the normal attitudes for parents to adopt toward their children?

First and foremost, an attitude of love. This should be an honest emotion, not a synthetic one, and should be designed to help the child to feel himself to be a worthy individual. No matter what the world does to a child, if his sense of importance is built up by his parents' devotion to him as a person, he can endure the buffeting and the conflicts of society.

Secondly, a hands-off attitude. This allows a child to grow up in his own direction. All children are individuals. All children make mistakes. They lie, they take what does not belong to them, they are cruel, mean, disrespectful, smarty, selfish, and so on.

It does not mean all of their lives they are going to be guilty of such behavior. The parents' attitude is helpful to better conduct or inhibiting to it. Her attitude should be, "Here, now, you are really a good child, we know that. But you've made a mistake. I'm here to show you those mistakes and I expect you to try to learn to get in more desirable ways. I'll show you why they are more desirable. We act that way. Our friends act that way. In fact all the persons you know and like act this way. Obviously so should you."

What the parent must make plain is no one condemns a child everlastingly for mistakes. They are part of the growing-up process. Even when a child makes mistakes over and over again his parents should never lose faith but that eventually he will learn what is the desirable way to act and will want to act that way.

The hands-off attitude means not to wash one's hands of the child and his mistakes, but to respect him for the personality he is. Children are booky, timid, aggressive, demonstrative or sociable, as evidence of what they themselves are. We, as parents, like them for what they are, and should not withhold our admiration until we are able to mold them into personalities of our choosing.

The willingness to love a child under every and all circumstances and despite his own personality, however it may differ from any we might have designed for him, is the greatest incentive toward helping children enjoy wholesome, happy living.

Our leaflet, "Obedience and Punishment," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Low-Brow Nation?

Neither John nor Mary will be among those who will walk to the front of the platform at the commencement exercises this month to receive their high school diplomas. They quit school several months ago to take jobs, to feel what Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of District schools, calls "the jingling of money in their pockets."

Their succumbing to the flesh pots, together with thousands of their classmates, has helped make a slump in high school graduates not only in the District, but throughout the Nation. Not alone is the call of the 18-year-olds to the armed forces depleting the high school enrollment. The call of the "Help Wanted" signs is also luring boys—and especially girls, from their history and grammar.

Leaving School Handicaps Future

The National Education Association reports a pronounced trend on the part of high school students to leave school to take jobs. The association deplores this, as it also does the forsaking of the schools by teachers who can get better salaries elsewhere. This will mean, it points out, a lowering of the educational level, and a generation of citizens not so well equipped to perform their duties. Another bad feature of the practise is that high school students frequently take jobs that are mechanically hazardous and that are injurious to health. What is more, a boy or girl who has left school seldom returns and hence faces life with inadequate preparation to earn and to function as a citizen.

Also concerned about the high school job takers is organized labor, which sees a serious postwar problem thereby developing. Untrained, unskilled, insufficiently educated, yet accustomed to easily gotten work and lax wartime standards of performance, the high school job takers will suddenly find themselves in a world of strong and ruthless competition, unable to hold their own. Whom will they blame? Probably society, the government, labor, capital, or a malevolent fate. But of course not themselves or their parents who permitted them to leave school and become half baked employes in offices and stores for the sake of immediate cash.

Half Educated, Are Poor Citizens

Educators are not only urging high school students not to leave school for jobs but are even advising college women to complete their courses if possible so that they will be of more value in the difficult adjustments of the world to come.

The greatest threat these callow half-educated workers hold is for the political future of this country. "Education is the only hope of a democracy," Carrie Chapman Catt has said, and in a world in which democracy must fight to survive, it must have the backing of citizens who can think for themselves and who can withstand the wooing of demagogues and dictators. In the era stretching ahead in which this country faces change and challenge on every side—social and economic reorganization within and new responsibility and leadership in world affairs—it cannot afford to have the level of education lowered.

Boys and girls who have become job holders, citizens, men and women of affairs overnight are not prepared to do the work the Nation requires to have done, to provide the leaders it will need so desperately, nor to supply the citizenry which is the "hope of democracy." Preparing to be soldiers of peace would be the most patriotic service most high school girls and boys could now render their country.

Three Square Meals

The poet Homer first coined the phrase "three square meals a day" but modern nutrition gives it added significance. Each of the daily meals makes its own contribution to the diet. Breakfast is an excellent meal in which to include whole-grain cereals or cereals restored to whole-grain nutritive values.

Mrs. U.S. Grant Enjoyed Role As First Lady

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin

The wife of President Ulysses S. Grant liked being First Lady so well that historians agree that it was she who influenced the general against his will and better judgment to seeking a third term. Thus it is that Julia Grant seems to have been the first (except for Dolly Madison) First Lady who really liked her place in life and enjoyed living in the White House. She wasn't frail and she liked parties and, in spite of all the political gossip that surrounded her husband, they do say the White House family was a happy and contented one.

Certainly President Grant (1869-70) could not have been the easiest husband in the world to have, although everyone agrees that the Grants got along famously. Julia had been a slave-owner's daughter from St. Louis and had married the future general when he was a mere lieutenant more or less fresh from West Point. Then she was slender, vivacious, fair and a good horsewoman, which is the historian's kind way of saying that she wasn't too much on the beautiful side. All praise can be given her when she stood by her husband during the discouraging years he spent in trying to cure himself of the alcohol habit. He had voluntarily resigned from the United States Army, determined to cure himself and to make his way in life. By all accounts he did finally at least partially lick the Demon Rum, although his tippling led to Lincoln's famous remark, but, in private life, he never made a very great financial success. So when the Civil War found him back in the ranks, Julia probably breathed a sigh of relief.

The Grants went to the White House in a blaze of glory. The four children, including Nellie, who was said to be the "most attractive of all the young women who have ever lived in the White House," and the President made up a happy family circle within which Julia beamed and bowed and had a fine time. She got rid of all that old French furniture, went in for heavy carved wardrobes, fancy over-mantel treatments and yards and yards of swagged fringe. The Grants gave lavish dinners, one of which was said to cost $1500 for 35 guests. Nellie's wedding was the talk of the Nation . . . with every dido that could be imagined, including invitations printed on white satin!

Red Cross Sends Soap To Allies

Soap is one of the most important prducts sent overseas by the American Red Cross. According to the headquarters of this organization, quantities of American soap have been shipped not only to help fight disease in countries suffering from war, but also for the comfort of prisoners and, in some cases, for men in our own armed forces. The Old World is suffering from an acute shortage of soap and dreads the possibility of epidemics resulting from lack of sanitation and cleanliness.

Red Cross shipments of soap overseas from the outbreak of war in 1939 to the close of 1942 totaled 4,659,630 pounds. More than half went to Russia, which received 2,484,698 pounds. France received 607,500 pounds; England, 504,340 pounds; Finland, one million 8-ounce bars; Spain, 114,390 pounds, and shipments have been made to French Africa, Egypt, China, Hawaii and the Philippines. Sixty thousand 7-ounce bars went to Poles interned in Hungary. Prisoners of war in Europe and the Far East have not been forgotten; and many of the men in our own armed forces on overseas duty have received soap from the Red Cross to supplement supplies provided by the Army anr Navy.

Eliminate All Fire Hazards

Good citizenship and good housekeeping demand that this year you inspect, clean and make essential repairs to your home beginning with a fire-retardant roof and going through the place right down to the cellar, eliminating all fire hazards. It also means that you take proper care of equipment as you go along and learn to use it properly.

And American women are learning. Here, for example, is your fine, white kitchen range, either gas or electric. You're learning to care for it as you do your best Sunday-go-to-meeting china. You no longer use coarse cleaning powders; you spurn steel wool (even if you could get it which you can't); you keep your eyes peeled for stray spots of vinegar, lemon and the like that cause discoloration. By this time you're really reading that booklet which came with the range (and which you glanced at and tucked away on the highest kitchen shelf). You're learning to take the stove apart and clean it thoroughly, but you also realize your own limitations so that you don't try to play electrician or little Miss Fix-it when burners refuse to heat or are clogged . . . or when unpleasant smells tell you that there is a gas leak somewhere. You use a hot solution of washing soda for clean-up jobs and, of course, you never wash electric coils.

Soldier Playwriting Stunt Reddens Some Noted Faces

REMEMBER, ABOUT A MONTH AGO, we were telling you of Producer John Golden's all-soldier playwriting contest to provide material for a bill of one-act plays to be presented as a benefit for the Soldiers and Sailors Club in New York? Well, sir, you'd be surprised!

JOHN GOLDEN

When Mr. Golden and the Second Service Command launched their project as the preliminary step to whipping up a show that would be written, as well as produced and acted, by servicemen, they felt pretty sure the response would be meager. Just goes to show how wrong even such astute gentlemen can be.

When it came time to do the weeding out, they found they had 115 scripts on their hands, so Mr. Golden, whose eyesight isn't what it used to be, appointed Elmer Rice, Moss Hart, Rachel Crothers, Kenyon Nicholson, Frederic Lonsdale and Russel Crouse as a play-reading committee to pick the winners. It was they who whittled the list from 115 down to the five one-acters that will comprise the program to be acted out for the Soldiers and Sailors Club on the night of June 14.

Comes now a bulletin saying that the play-readers' faces are all exceedingly red. It is difficult to understand why this should be, unless it is the flush of pride that is suffusing their physimahagonys. At least, the evidence seems to be that they knew a professional job of playwriting when they saw one—or five.

As it turns out, each of the prize-winning authors was formerly a theatrical man, in one capacity or another, or a writer.

Private John O'Dea, now stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington, who turned in a little something called "Where E'er We Go," was an actor before going into uniform. Another winner, Aviation Cadet Ralph Nelson, now at Souther Field, Americus, Ga., having won his wings, also is a former actor. His playlet is called "Mail Call." The author of "Button Your Lip" is Pvt. Irving Gaynor Neiman, now a radio student in the Air Forces Technical Training Command at Chicago, but before that on the staff of Time Magazine and later a publicist. Corpl. Kurt Kasnar dedicated his play, "First Cousins," to the foreign-born in the Army, he being a native of Vienna. He once was associated with Max Reinhardt, in Salzburg. Pvt. Alfred D. Geto, who wrote "Pack Up Your Troubles," wrote, acted and produced radio programs, night club shows and revue sketches prior to his induction. He and Kasnar are attached to the Special Services branch of the Army in New York.

So what? So it ought to be a better show than anyone expected the benefit audience would be seeing a week from tonight. And I still don't see why that distinguished committee of play-judges should be going around wearing red faces for any other reason than sunburn.

Some More Nice Timing

The weekend headlines, announcing the meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, the Chiefs of Staff of the United States and British armies and the high command in North Africa, being what they were, it begins to look as if the Warner Brothers are not the only ones who are able to profit by a peculiar coincidence of fact and film. Beginning June 11, the Trans-Lux Theater will be playing one of "The World in Action" series, bearing the title of "The Invasion of Europe."

It is reported that the film highlights all possible starting points for an Allied assault, from the Arctic Circle to the Mediterranean; details the strategy that might be followed at each and reveals the Axis fortifications which the invaders will have to overcome. It also reputedly traces the feverish activities of the Axis further to strengthen its defenses at vulnerable points on the Continent—the Balkans, France, Norway—and to bombproof its U-boat bases.

Now all Manager Roland Robbins of the Trans-Lux has to worry about is: If the implications of the latest North African conference are borne out, WHEN?

Announcement is made by Lowell Mellett, chief of the Motion Picture Bureau of OWI, and Francis Harmon, executive vice chairman of the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, that a joint program of 52 "War Information" short subjects will be furnished gratis to 16,500 "pledged" theaters, at weekly intervals, beginning August 1. Thirteen or more will be produced by the film industry, the remainder to come from the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the various United Nations, the National War Fund and the American Red Cross. The new program will supersede the present "Victory" series, produced by the OWI, and the "America Speaks" series of 26 shorts made by the industry on themes suggested by the OWI.

Members of the President's Cabinet, the Supreme Court, top-ranking officers of the Army and Navy and other representative Government officials will be guests of the Division of Public Relations of the U. S. Maritime Commission and War Shipping Administration at a special screening of "Action in the North Atlantic," in the Departmental Auditorium, on Constitution Avenue, tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock. The list of dignitaries who have accepted the invitation to the preview fills a foolscap page-and-a-half of typewriting—12 words to a line, 30 lines to the page. That is a considerable number of dignitaries. And they will be seeing one of the most stirring action picture ever made. So will you, when it opens Friday at the Earle.

Next-to-the-War-Comes-the-Weather Note

Now aren't you ashamed of yourself for ever having complained about those dinky little snowstorms last winter?

Pix

As an agreeable departure from "horror" in double doses, the Pix Theater currently is presenting two popperfuls of tomfoolery for those who like their merriment flavored with maize.

The first item on the double bill that opened Saturday is the Lum and Abner nonsense called "Two Weeks to Live." In this one, Chester Lauck and Norris Goff, in their familiar roles of the elderly rustics, become involved in the complexities of the financial marts and the heady temptations of Chicago. Having inherted a worthless railroad in which they have sold stock to the neighbors in Pine Ridge, their problem is to raise enough quick money to reimburse the investors. To this end, Abner is plunged into all manner of hazardous enterprises, rendered the more alarming because through a medical misapprehension he has been told he has only two weeks to live. The "gags" are neither very funny nor at all suitable to the characters of such age.

There is infinitely more snap, but no more substance, in "Ladies Day," the added starter. This baseball fable revolves around the throwing arm and throbbing heart of Wacky Waters, the star whose pitching is effective in direct proportion to the absence of beautiful dames from the stands. When he marries Pepita, the glamour girl from Hollywood, practically between innings, a World Series is put in jeopardy by as lunatic a series of effervescent events as you would—or would not—care to see.

Trans-Lux

The newsreel "mop up" of the Allied triumph in Tunisia furnishes the highlight of the news section of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater. The enthusiasm of the residents of the liberated North African regions is akin to that displayed on this side at the announcement of the armistice that ended the war.

Further excitement is lent the reportorial portions of the program by the scenes of a Coast Guard cutter sinking that U-boat that has been on the newspaper front pages so much of late. Additional interest will center in the prodigious Midwest output of block busters, with compliments to the Axis; graduation at West Point, Memorial Day observances and, for a touch of comedy, the "monkey business" at the St. Louis zoo.

Foremost among the short subjects is the March of Time issue devoted to what goes on "Inside Fascist Spain." What goes on is a reasonably complete demonstration of conditions that would prevail throughout conquered Europe were the Axis "new order" permitted to triumph. It is an illuminating and disheartening picture that the documentary paints.

With quite opposite effect, Clark Gable, now a captain in the Army Air Force, does the narration for the week's ubiquitous "Wings Up," one of the most engrossing training films so far released. It gives a comprehensive notion of precisely what it is—and how—the boys are learning at the Officers Candidate School at Miami Beach.

According to Split-Second Timetable

CHARLES COBURN AND JEAN ARTHUR

put their share-the-apartment, housekeeping schedule to the test in one of the amusing early sequences in Columbia's hilarious production of "The More the Merrier" which, after a successful fortnight at the Earle, now is regaling laugh-seekers at the Metropolitan Theater. Joel McCrea is the third star of this finely turned comedy of wartime Washington.

HEDDA HOPPER

'No Time for Comedy!'

Hollywood, Calif., June 6—The latest development on the Joan Barry-Charlie Chaplin situation is this: They had a cozy little luncheon down by the Chaplin pool. Now Hollywood is wondering whether it's reconciliation or whether marriage is in the offing. . . . Everybody knows Chaplin pictures have made millions laugh. He's been called a genius.

CHARLES CHAPLIN

It's implied by many people here and elsewhere that a genius should have special privileges. Chaplin's had many. First, the privilege of making his home, fortune, and reputation in America, without ever making any attempt to become a citizen of our country. He's had an opportunity to contribute to the motion picture relief fund home. He didn't. But he did contribute $100 toward buying a station wagon for the Red Cross. He availed himself of the privilege of using Carnegie Hall for the purpose of demanding a second front, when that front had already been arranged by the British and American governments.

Flat Denial

At a meeting of prominent Jews of Hollywood to discuss the raising of funds to help arm the 200,000 Jews of Palestine who wanted to fight for the British, when Chaplin was called upon, he arose and declared "I am not a Jew! I am a citizen of the world!" Jews should be proud of their heritage. Christ was a Jew. And for more than 2000 years Jews and Christians alike all over the world have tried to follow in the footsteps of our Saviour. . . . Now, the case of Joan Berry is this. She was engaged by Chaplin about a year and a half ago to play in "Shadow and Substance." He trained her and gave her screen tests. I understand the tests were very good. Then Chaplin changed his mind.

Happy New Year

Around New Year's, Miss Barry was picked up in Beverly Hills as a vagrant and received a 90-day suspended sentence. There was a man present who gave her a tourist ticket back to New York and $100 in cash. Miss Barry went halfway to New York, changed her mind, and returned to Hollywood. A month ago she walked into my office and told me her story. That night she visited Chaplin, the police were called and she was sent to jail for 30 days . . . By that time she had friends who went to her defense and got her out. But she was still under the jurisdiction of the Beverly Hills police and Justice of the Peace Holland, through a friend of Chaplin, took her case. . . . She was whisked to a hospital. No one knew where she was. She finaly was released, after many editorials had been written. Then her mother arrived. A settlement was proposed whereby she would get $2500—$50 a week until her child was 4 months old.

Miss Barry and her mother came to see me again a few days ago. I asked her why she came to me. Her reply was, "Because of an article you wrote about an unknown girl a year ago. It came out on my twenty-second birthday." . . . Here are excerpts from that article: "This is written for just one girl in Hollywood. I don't know who you are. You haven't been discovered yet. But I can tell you there's a luscious package waiting for you labeled 'fame.' A gentleman named Charlie Chaplin will be sending it over whenever he's ready. I think you should know what's in it. You'll be that lucky girl chosen by Chaplin to play the top feminine role in "Shadow and Substance." It's your chance, the opportunity of a lifetime. You can say farewell to that one-room apartment with a daybed in one corner and a cook stove in the other. You'll be living in a rosy dream world of shining limousines, sables and exploding flash bulbs.

Modified By War

"O, yes, you will. Or maybe you would have, if it hadn't been for wartime restrictions . . . Anyway, you'll be somebody. All that will be in your tinsled package. Something more, too. Something not quite so good. Something you can't foresee. There've been many Chaplin leading ladies before you. All got the same package with the same trimmings," [All—except Paulete Goddard.] . . . I went down the line and told of her predecessors, finishing up with the story of Myrna Kennedy, who was a youngster hardly out of pigtails, busy with her schoolbooks, when her Chaplin chance came along. After she played the leading part in "The Circus," her film career went glimmering . . . "The tradition of the Chaplin leading ladies has taken a definite pattern. You were nobody when he discovered you. You were sitting on top of the world for a few months. Then you were nobody again."

What's to Become of Her

Now, Joan Barry is somebody. She's a human being. She's about to become a mother. It looks as tho her chance for the leading part in "Shadow and Substance" has gone, too. Will her child have a name? What is to become of that child and its mother, Joan Barry? . . . Those are the questions Hollywood is asking today. Those are the questions Hollywood has a right to ask and not only hope for an answer but to demand one.

Still Pursues Her!

Bob Hope and Bing Crosby were in Atlanta last Monday when Crosby's horse, Don Bingo, won the Suburban Handicap and its $27,000 purse. Bing had made his customary nominal bet on his horse, and then went off for a round of golf at the Capital City Country Club. Hope heard the race results over the radio, and phoned the country club immediately. "Mr. Crosby is out on the course," he told the manager. "Get him to come in, to answer this call. Tell him I have an important message for him." . . . In due time the manager reported to Bob: "Mr. Crosby says to tell you he's $185 behind, and won't come in until he's even."

At Farragut Square in Washington, last Monday, a news commentator seated himself on a park bench, where a small boy began to shine his shoes. John L. Lewis sat down nearby, and was joined by a lady. The commentator couldn't overhear their conversation. He told the shoe-shine boy: "Hang around that man, and keep your ears open for a few words. When you get enough of his words, come back and tell me, and I'll give you $1" . . . The youngster began cavorting near Lewis' feet, rolling under the bench, leaping over the rail, until Lewis finally said: "Shoo! Git!" He scampered back to the commentator, who asked: "Well, what did you hear?" . . . "Nothin'," said the boy. "He got angry 'cause I said: 'Talk louder, Mister, I'm gettin' a dollar.'"

When Burnett Hershey, the correspondent, was in England recently, he watched an American troop train pull into a village near an Army camp. The train halted and a lieutenant stepped off. He saw an R. A. F. C. captain, saluted and asked: "Well, captain, what do you want me to do now? . . . "Get your men off the train, and march them onto those trucks," said the captain . . . "Is that all?" asked the American officer . . . The captain nodded . . . The lieutenant turned toward the train, took a whistle from his pocket, blew a shrill blast—and the train went off.

Lord and Lady Spencer regularly invite a group of American soldiers to visit their manor at Northamptonshire. There Lord Spencer acts as the guide. He entertained a group of Signal Corps men and showed them his Tudor staircase, his famed portrait gallery, his rare gold-plate service and his collection of curios. This long, personally conducted tour was made at night and all the objects he exhibited to the Signal Corps men were under perfect illumination. "Any questions?" Lord Spencer asked . . . "Yes, sir. Just one question," a Signal Corps sergeant finally asked. "What do you use here—A. C. or D. C. current?"

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who died last week, was a simple country doctor who, as do most men who attain sudden prominence, headed straight for New York's bright lights. During that first visit to Broadway, Dr. Dafoe watched what he thought were the sinful chorus lines and naively asked: "Are all these girls really stenographers in the daytime?" . . . The backwoods doctor who accomplished a remarkable feat in medical history returned to New York frequently to meet the most eminent men in the Nation. During one of his visits he received an invitation to the White House. When he came back from Washington, he refused to divulge anything about his talk with the President. "Those of us who saw him then asked him for some story. "Not even a word?" he was urged. "What did you and Roosevelt talk about" . . . "One word," he finally relented. "Babies."

Apostolic Delegation Is Center of Information Service

Priests Deliver Messages From Prisoners of War to Worried Families

By Peggy Preston

They seek to preserve family ties in a war-torn world.

In the cool, high-ceilinged rooms of the austere Apostolic Delegation on Massachusetts Avenue some 30 to 35 Catholic priests and seminarians, with this as their motivating philosophy, are performing their part in a far-flung war relief project. Together they form the central agency in this country for the Vatican's world-wide Information Service.

Through their hands daily passes a vast interchange of information concerning prisoners of war, civilians in countries at war and civilian internees. These messages, collected from and distributed to all parts of the world, are for the purpose of informing individuals and families of the whereabouts of a loved one, lost in the maelstrom of a global war.

One of the earnest, hard-working young priests at the delegation tells why the Vatican has seen fit to institute this service that brings aid to Protestant, Catholic and Jew alike.

"In time of war, family ties are often torn asunder," he explains. "The Vatican hopes by this service to help alleviate some of the anxieties and uncertainties that so disturb family life during such times as these."

Organized in January

Organized last January, the central operating headquarters are located at the Vatican City in Rome. A branch bureau operates in each of the countries where a papal delegate is in residence.

In the course of a normal working day at the Washington delegation the staff handles messages to or from such countries as Germany, France, Rumania, Greece, Hungary, Egypt and Denmark. Officials there emphasize the fact that the service does not operate solely to facilitate communications between Italians throughout the world. "This is an erroneous impression," the spokesman points out. "Perhaps brought on by the fact that our headquarters are in Rome."

Only in Japan has the Apostolic Delegate been unable to establish a message service, and no contact at all has been made in the Philippines.

The priests who form the regular staff of the office here have a superhuman job on their hands. Since the opening of the office in January they have handled a total of 106,000 messages. Seminarians lend a helping hand during certain hours of the day. With the help of no more than 35 part-time workers the staff carries out the great bulk of detail attendant upon such an undertaking.

Compared with the International Red Cross, which has a staff of 5000 persons in Geneva alone for similar work, the Vatican service is almost minute in comparison. But a special effort toward a personalized policy is making the service an unusual success.

Whenever possible, notification of a war prisoner's whereabouts is delivered personally to the family by the local priest.

"We like to think it helps to lessen anxiety to do it this way instead of through a postal notice," the staff members explain.

Inquiry Made Through Local Priest

They make no claims to swift service. Only notification of a prisoner's whereabouts is sent via radio. Messages between prisoners and families go by ordinary post and frequently take several months to complete. But on several occasions the bureau's information has preceded by some weeks an official War Department notification.

Persons wishing to make contact with the service may do so through the local priest, who in turn notifies the delegation here. All messages clear through the office here and are dispatched, after passing through censorship. Incoming messages go through similar channels. No facilities are available for transmitting letters, packages or telegrams to prisoners of war.

Head of the service is His Excellency the Most Rev. Alexander Evreinoff, titular Bishop of Pionia, a Russian Catholic bishop residing in Rome. Chief of the local branch is Washington's Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani.

Chinese Art to Be Shown at War Relief Center

Unusual in its retrospective view of an ancient civilization will be the exhibit which opens tomorrow afternoon at the United War Relief Center under the auspices of the United China Relief Organization.

The paintings of Miss Alison Stilwell, 22-year-old daughter of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, will mirror the vital educational force emanating from the Chinese classical tradition. Other items in the display, by Chinese artists, will date back as far as the fourteenth century measuring in some degree the age-long history of artistic and cultural development achieved by our transpacific neighbors and allies.

To the preview reception tomorrow afternoon, from 5 to 7 p. m., have been invited many friends of China from United States official circles here, from the United Nations embassies and from among those who have traveled in China and know it well.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heads the distinguished list of patrons.

Miss Stilwell will not be present during her Washington exhibit, as she left recently for Carmel, Calif., where she intends to pursue her art studies and continue her painting.

From June 9 through June 30, the United China Relief exhibit will be open free to the public every weekday at the 1218 Connecticut Avenue United War Relief Center from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. The committee on arrangements also contemplates special Sunday and evening events, the dates and hours to be announced.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Joyce of College Heights, Md., announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Ann, to Lieut. Nicholas R. Rosewag, jr., U. S. Army Air Corps, on Friday, June 4, in St. Jerome's Church, Hyattsville, Md. Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left for Fort Myers, Fla., where Lieutenant Rosewag is stationed.

Martha Taylor, J. C. Willis Are Married

Miss Martha Lydia Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Lucius Taylor, and John Chancellor Willis, jr., son of Mrs. Anna W. Willis of Arlington, Va., and the late Mr. Willis, were married yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock, the ceremony taking place at St. John's Church on Lafayette Square. The Rev. John G. Magee officiated. White flowers and greens decorated the church, and preceding the ceremony Wesley Steel, organist, and Mrs. Bette S. Wagner, vocalist, gave a program of wedding music.

Mr. Taylor gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was of white marquisette made with a tight bodice, square neckline and long pointed sleeves trimmed with seed pearls. The ruffled skirt was fashioned with inserts of Irish lace, and her long tulle veil fell from a Dutch cap edged in seed pearls and orange blossoms. Buy a Bond

Sometime between now and Wednesday afternoon . . . Buy a Bond. For your providence you'll be rewarded with a complimentary ticket to the great Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus. That's added incentive that our good ol' Uncle planned for swelling War Bond Sales at once . . . but the fact remains that we all must buy Bonds early and often, reward or no, for it's the best investment we can make in the future security of the U. S. A.

LEAVING PATTI A PRISONER ON VARZONI'S BOAT, THE "WILL-O'-THE-WISP, WE TURN BACK TO HER HOTEL, WHERE MARY IS TALKING WITH THE BROADWAY COLUMNIST, TOM TATTLE...
NO, PATTI DIDN'T COME HOME TONIGHT—SHE PHONED TO TELL ME SHE WAS MEETING LOU VARZONI RIGHT AFTER WORK!
I GUESS I'M NOT STOOD UP—SINCE I DIDN'T HAVE A DATE WITH HER—BUT I DID HAVE HOPES!
GRAB A HAT, MRS. WORTH—I'LL TAKE YOU OVER TO THE FORTUNE TELLER'S TO GET YOUR BADGE!
YES—IT WAS SO STUPID OF ME TO LEAVE IT THERE!
OF COURSE, EVEN IF VARZONI SAW IT, HE WOULDN'T RECOGNIZE YOUR PICTURE—SINCE YOU'VE NEVER MET!
BUT, TOM! WE HAVE MET—!

HURRY, FREDDIE, HERE COMES THE MAN TO PAINT OUR BATHROOM!
OF COURSE, IF IT ISN'T CONVENIENT I CAN COME BACK LATER, BUT I CAN'T PROMISE WHEN!
DON'T MIND US. WE JUST LIVE HERE!
I'M JUST BRINGING MY THINGS THIS MORNING. I'LL TRY TO START PAINTING TOMORROW!
YOU TAKE PAINTERS WHEN YOU GET 'EM THESE DAYS!

Clatterbuck Restive and Sleepless in Winchester Jail Cell

Winchester, Va., June 6.—For the first time since his confinement in the city jail here, Thomas William Clatterbuck, confessed slayer of five persoins on the Loudoun County farm of A. Morris Love, is feeling real fear.

He spent today reading a pocket-sized Bible, pacing the floor and lying sleeplessly and restlessly on his bunk.

The iron calm of Clatterbuck after the hysterical breakdown that marked his confession is gone.

These facts The Post learned from a reliable source close to Clatterbuck today. It was said further that the man who confessed bludgeoning or shooting to death Love, his wife, son, hired man and the hired man's wife, is completely unnerved and has lost his appetite.

Officers confronted him yesterday with a gun, allegedly used to commit the murders. It was not the gun Clatterbuck had taken from James Love, but one he had brought with him when he came to talk about the note for $2000 on which he had forged his father's name.

Up to that point Clatterbuck had been resting fairly well and "taking a normal amount of food." Today he is restless, sleeps little and is showing signs of strain and fatigue.

For Thomas William Clatterbuck knew that unless he could make his original confession stick, his chances of pleading "temporary insanity" would be slim. The discovery of the murder gun and the revelation that he carried it with him when he went to the Love farm last Tuesday morning make it clear that Clatterbuck was prepared for murder.

Discovery of the gun in a creek between the Love home and Hamilton clarified the last of the mystery of the case, for the FBI had reported that the gun belonging to James Love, which Clatterbuck said he used for the shootings, was not the one that fired the fatal bullets.

Raid Jitters Prove Unfounded in Carolinas

New York, June 6 (INS)—The First Fighter Command ordered a blue air raid alert in the vicinity of Wilmington, N. C., today at the approach of an unidentified plane which later turned out to be friendly.

The "all clear" order was issued by Brig. Gen. Glen O. Barcus. The alerted area included the southern part of North Carolina and the northern part of South Carolina.

Asthma Sufferers Sleep Fine When Free From Mucus

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today.
